Another Lynching To Discourage Kidnapers Hard to Please All Get the Right Labels

By Arthur Brisbane

THE STORY of the latest lynching is unpleasant, and arouses sympathy, not so much for the victim, dragged through the streets of the town by a rope attached to his neck at the rear end of an automobile, hanged, and his body burned, as with the mob, men, women and children, "packed so closely about the fire that burned the Negro's body that the police could not fight their way through."

The victim, it is alleged, had confessed his crime, for which no punishment that human beings might properly inflict could be too great.

The dreadful part of the whole performance is its revelation of human nature, when you "scratch through the surface."

A white boy of 18 cutting off the Negro's ear while he was still alive and helpless scarcely proves the superiority of his race, and, most amazing, in the South, where respect for women is great, the Associated Press reports: "Under the oak tree, despite the presence of women and children, all the victim's clothes were torn from his body, and he hung there for some minutes nude."

There is consolation in the knowledge that a mob's actions do not accurately represent the character of individuals that make up the mob. Members of a mob are as different from their ordinary selves as dogs hunting in a pack from an individual dog by the fireside. You realize it when you read, also from the Associated Press dispatch: "The mob members seemed crazed, continually leaping on the Negro, even after he fell to the ground and was unable to rise."

The late Professor Shaler of Harvard, in his book, "The Mob," declares that under sufficient provocation even a group of clergymen might be transformed into a lynching mob.

Those that tortured, hanged and burned that Negro are to be considered as a mob only, not as representing any race or section. The world saw such mobs, on a bigger scale, during the World War.

President Roosevelt and his Department of Justice deserve thanks for their energy in discouraging kidnaping. Sending eight or nine kidnapers to jail for life is effective discouragement.

Now the President orders an intensive investigation be made of the Lindbergh kidnaping. Kidnapers, present and to come, would be influenced, beneficially, by conviction of the Lindbergh criminals, even at this late date.

An able police official of Chicago, who worked on the horrible Loeb-Leopold murder, believes that Col. Lindbergh's child was abducted and murdered by one or more depraved students, as a "stunt crime."

Mr. Capone told this writer, who visited him in the Chicago prison, "the Lindbergh baby was not abducted by any regular mob. They wouldn't be so foolish. That was the work of some crazy fool working by himself."

Charles W. Bryan, governor of Nebraska, brother of William Jennings Bryan, fears what "farmers' unrest may lead to." He says "It is bringing on a condition that we cannot shut our eyes to."

He and the farmers, whom Gov. Bryan describes as a "seething mass of unrest," denounce what they call the "policy of pouring money in at the top."

Joe Crawford, of Morehead, Kentucky, past his hundredth year, decided it was about time to die, and started digging his grave, he never finished digging. When he failed to return to his work, neighbors found his body, finished the digging and buried him.

There is no fine monument, and there will be nothing in histories, encyclopedias, or the "lives of great men," about him. But Joe Crawford lived his 100 years, did his share of the world's work as it came to him, obeyed the law, behaved himself, helped his neighbors, injured nobody.

In the Angel Gabriel's book, his name is perhaps written as large as the name of Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini or even Chinchpher Columbus or Genghis Khan.

WOMAN LINKS GUSTIN GANG MEMBER

EXCLUSIVE!

Desperate efforts by the Gustin gang to raise $50,000 bail for their jailed leaders, Steve "Gustin" Wallace, inspired the recent South Station postal robbery, police said today following arrest of Coleman G. Foley of Branton st., Dorchester.

Foley, a notorious member of the Gustin gang, was picked up early today on suspicion of connection with the postal robbery, in which the holdup men missed $100,000 by inches, and got only about $30 for their pains.

Coleman G. Foley

Both Foley and Benjamin Tilley of Roxbury, who is also being held on suspicion in connection with the robbery, were placed in police headquarters lineup today and viewed by many holdup victims.

Foley was picked out of the lineup by Mrs. Nellie Neice of 96 East Newton st., South End, who said he "looked like" one of two men she saw shifting sacks from one car to another in front of her home at 5:30 a. m. on the day of the mail robbery.

"Are you sure of this?" Mrs. Neice was asked. "This is a serious charge."

"Well, I don't know," she replied, "but I think he looks like one."

U. S. READY TO RECOGNIZE SOVIETS

Exchange of Messages With Roosevelt Stirs Moscow

By LINTON WELLS

Moscow, Oct. 20 (INS)—The Soviet foreign office will make public at 11 o'clock tonight (4 p. m. Washington time) an exchange of cablegrams between President Franklin D. Roosevelt and President Michael Kalinin of the all-union central committee of Soviet Russia opening the way for early recognition of the Soviet government by the United States.

International News Service is able to make this exclusive revelation from authoritative sources.

Taking the initiative, according to this information, President Roosevelt dispatched a telegram to Kalinin expressing willingness to open negotiations with the Soviets for establishing official relations and settlement of all outstanding differences.

Throughout the day, rumors that the United States would formally announce Russian recognition spread throughout Moscow, and apparent official confirmation with announcement that a communique would be issued at 11 P. M.

Information obtained by International News Service, however, revealed the communique would merely detail exchange of messages between the American and Russian governments.

There appeared little doubt, however, this publication would reveal the way has been cleared for early recognition.

U. S. Kidnap Squad on Lindbergh Case

Washington, Oct. 20 (INS)—All records and information relative to the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby were in the hands of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the investigation division of the Justice Department today.

The famous kidnaping squad, which has solved every abduction case since the federal statute was enacted, was formally in charge of one of the most perplexing crimes of modern times.

Coleman G. DOLAN ASKED TO RESIGN AS TRUSTEE OF FORESTERS

South Boston Court Moves for Ousting of City Treasurer

BULLETIN

City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan today termed the resolution of the South Boston court of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, which asked his resignation as trustee, as "eminently unfair and quite certain to be so regarded by every open-minded person.

The resignation of City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan as one of three trustees of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, because of his seven-cent compromise settlement with the Federal National Bank, is secretly demanded in a resolution passed by the South Boston court of the order, it was revealed today.

Forty-nine of 50 members of the South Boston Court, 83, Peter and Paul, voted to adopt the resolution at its meeting in Bethesda Hall, South Boston, Wednesday night.

The action, it is believed, presages similar action by other courts of the order and probably a bitter fight on behalf of Dolan's supporters.

ONLY ONE OPPOSED

Dolan's widely-discussed settlement of his $78,806 indebtedness to the closed bank for $5888 was cited as reason for the resolve, which was introduced by William J. Sullivan, former high chief ranger of the order and ex-State Senator. Only one member opposed.

Sullivan called attention to the fact that the Massachusetts C. O. F. has real estate valued at $400,000, cash in similar amount, and $3,000,000 in bonds and securities which Dolan with the two other trustees, John P. Higgins of Boston and James H. Benson of Springfield, is called upon to administer.

BATTLE EXPECTED

Dolan has long been a powerful factor in the affairs of the Massachusetts Foresters and is not expected to relinquish his position without a fight in which it is predicted he will have the backing of his close friend, Mayor Curley.

Following disclosure of his Federal National settlement and a similar discharge of a $5582 debt in the State National Bank of Lynn, a Federal National affiliate, it was disclosed that Dolan owns a yacht originally valued at $100,000 and a home assessed for $25,000.

FEDERAL TRIAL OPENS FIGHT ON STRAW NOTES

The government's prosecution of the Federal National Bank case has become an administration "drive" to rid national banking of its straw note evil, it became known today.

An unprecedented means of attack on this widespread, unethical but heretofore invulnerable practice by which bankers are alleged to have looted their own banks through the use of straws was upheld by federal court here yesterday.

There will be no relenting, for the government is prepared to go before the United States Supreme Court if resource in appeal and exception is taken in the Federal National cases, it was stated by the investigators from Washington.

Indictment for false entries of the banker who resorts to use of a straw to obtain his bank's funds for himself is the new weapon, approved yesterday by Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan, with which the

EXCLUSIVE!

While process servers hunted Massachusetts and New Hampshire for her, Mrs. Eunice Sanders Patrone, "kidnap mother," was found in tears today by the Boston Evening American.

Her four-year-old daughter, the same with whom she fled Suffolk courthouse Wednesday, was not with her.

"And no one will ever know where she is. I will never give her up," the broken-hearted mother sobbed.

This was her answer to adoption proceedings by which ex-convict ruled Jeanne Marie Nickerson was to be legally adopted by an East Boston couple and lose forever her identity as Mary Patrone, "farmed out" daughter of a former New Hampshire school teacher.

DELAY KIDNAP WARRANT

Mrs. Patrone, steadfastly refusing to disclose the whereabouts of her child, told her story to the Boston Evening American, even as habeas corpus proceedings opened a hunt for her—and even as attorneys for the East Boston couple sought rulings in a new legal move to produce the child for formal adoption.

Atty. Samuel Segal, counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nickerson, sought the new rulings after he had made a fruitless trip to a New Hampshire farm, at which he believed the child was hidden.

Meanwhile, he abandoned a plan to obtain a kidnap warrant against the mother, although he said such a warrant had been assured.

"I'LL NEVER GIVE UP"

The tearful mother was found at a South End lodging house she has maintained since she came to Boston to claim the child she boarded with the Nickersons at the age of 20 days.

This house had been searched continuously for the past two days in vain effort to find the mother and child.

"I'll never give her up," she repeated again and again.

"I have some rights in this matter and I'll fight to the bitter end. I'll never agree to give her up."

At Mrs. Patrone reviewed the strange life of her little daughter, the modest kitchen of the lodging house was rent with her sobs. Between sentences she looked, longingly, at a crib in the next room and walked many times to its side.

"They said I left my baby with

3 Shot Down in Jersey Silk Riot

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 20 (INS)—Three workmen were shot down and dozen were overcome by tear gas during a terrific battle today between police and 650 strikers outside the National Silk Dye Co. factory in East Paterson.

The home of an aged woman was raided by the strikers and the excitement caused a shock from which she may die.

Fifteen persons were arrested.

LOWELL MOVE OF LYNN SHOP IS BLOCKED

An attempt to use half a dozen City of Lowell trucks to move a shoe plant, normally employing 350 workers, from Lynn to Lowell was halted today by a protest of Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn to Charles H. Slowey, Lowell's chief executive, and strikers declared they would complain to NRA officials.

The factory that sought to make this move is that of Barr & Bloomfield in Brookline st., which has been tied up for 15 weeks by a strike. Officials of the firm negotiated last week with the Lowell Chamber of Commerce.

Arrival of the Lowell trucks today brought a storm of protest to Manning's office. He telephoned Slowey at once, and the latter ordered his trucks back—empty.

PICKETS SPOIL PLAN

The plan to use Lowell city trucks to move machinery and equipment was discovered by strike pickets at the plant.

They immediately notified William B. Mahan, business agent for the National Shoe Workers' Association. He said later that he would confer with Congressman William P. Connery, of Lynn, because he believed that the attempted move was a violation at least of the spirit of the National Recovery Act.

He explained that Barr & Bloomfield sought to pay a rate lower than Lynn', prevailing wage scale on the theory that it was the only firm in the city that marketed its shoes through jobbers and therefore had to pay lower wages than plants that sell direct.

Instead of the reputed $200,000 estate left by Donald C. Brett, head of the Timothy Smith department store, who committed suicide last July, there is an estate of only $6489.34, according to an inventory filed today in probate court at Dedham.

It was in an attempt to draw something from her late husband's estate that Mrs. Arlene Brett went to the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Co. yesterday with her 5-year-old son, Donald, Jr., and threatened to sit in the bank until she was given aid.

The bank is named as executor, and in making her demands, the young widow said that she and her son were destitute. She was cut off with $100 in the will, while the rest was left to Brett's mother.

The estate is made up of $4493.34 in personal property and $2096 in real estate, the personal property being divided as follows: 80 shares of Timothy Smith Co. stock, valued at $4000; deposit in Cape Cod Five Cents Savings Bank, $22.81; deposit in First National Bank of Boston, $5.73; personal note of N. J. Murphy, $100; automobile valued at $275.

Real estate consists of one-third undivided interest in the Nathan Underwood lot at Harwich, valued at $233; a one-third interest in the Sidney Underwood property at Harwich, valued at $866, and a one-third interest in the Long Pond property at Harwich, valued at $1187.

PRODUCTION COSTS SOUGHT AFTER EMBARGO ON WHEAT

Two Million Grain Producers in 24 States Express Disapproval With Federal Program

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 20 (INS)—Heeding the increasing tide of agrarian revolt, directors of the National Farm Holiday Association today drafted plans for a farm strike of nation-wide scope, scheduled to begin at noon tomorrow.

All units of the National Guard today awaited mobilization orders to enforce the embargo of Gov. William Langer against out-state shipments of wheat, North Dakota's principal crop.

Adjt.-Gen. Earl Searles ordered the state militiamen to be prepared for mobilization on three hours notice.

In a statement today Gov. Langer concurred with the proclamation of Farm Holiday Association directors proclaiming a national farm strike. The governor resorted to the embargo in the face of steadily lowering wheat prices, which he said were "draining the state's resources."

Officers of the association, having the assurance of support in Nebraska, North Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa, as well as other states in the agricultural Middle West, dispatched copies of the strike proclamation to state holiday groups with instructions to carry on the holiday order.

Five states were represented at the secret meeting of directors which followed the spirit of Gov. William Langer's embargo on wheat shipments in North Dakota by drafting the strike call.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

"We have reached the point where we are fast losing confidence in the administration," the proclamation began.

"Therefore, we will pay no taxes or interest until we have first cared for our families.

"We will pay no interest-bearing debts until we receive the cost of production.

"We will buy only those commodities which complete necessity demands.

"We will not sell our products unless we receive the cost of production, but will exchange our products with labor and the unemployed for the things we need on the farm, on the basis of cost of production for both parties."

President Milo Reno, who presided at the session, said the strike would continue until the farmer has won prices which guarantee the cost of production.

Reno said the strike would be taken up in 24 agricultural states represented by the association membership.

UNREST INCREASING

The plan to exchange farm products for those of labor represents a new departure in co-operative effort, although the principle was advanced by Reno at the recent Des Moines convention.

Officers of the holiday association at Des Moines likewise concurred in the movement. Asserting that the strike would help to increase dairy and grain prices, Wisconsin delegates approved of the holiday order.

Previous to the national holiday call the Minnesota Association returned a majority of votes in favor of halting deliveries to market, although Gov. Floyd B. Olson refused to join in the wheat embargo movement insituted in North Dakota.

Scottsboro Trial Will Start, Nov. 27

Decatur, Ala., Oct. 20—Judge W. W. Callahan of Morgan Circuit Court announced, after a conference with Atty.-Gen. Thomas E. Knight, Jr., and Judge James E. Horton, that a special term of court would be called for Nov. 27, for the trial of the "Scottsboro cases."

DAUGHTER AIDS 'TORCH WIDOW'

Mrs. Annie Wita's defense at her trial for the alleged torch murder of her husband, Anthony, continued before a jury in Middlesex court today, with the daughter by an earlier marriage, Jennie Kolkman, waiting to be called as a defense witness.

The 42-year-old Cambridge widow is alleged to have poured gasoline on her sleeping husband at their home in Harding st., then set his clothing afire. Mrs. Wita claims to have had no knowledge of how the fire started.

The jury must weigh Wita's death-bed accusation of his wife, made after he had been given morphine to relieve his pain, in the light of testimony that the narcotic may have affected the reliability of his statement.

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 20 (AP)—Yale students were admonished by Dean C. W. Mendell today to show better behavior to trolley cars.

A notice, published in the Yale News, urged the students to avoid disorders, lest the polley company be forced to use "police methods."

The notice read:

"Strenuous complaint from trolley car authorities indicate that considerable nuisance has been caused by members of Yale College.

"Disorders on the cars, refusal to pay fares and dangerous behavior in entering and leaving the cars should be avoided by all students."

LEAGUE RULED BY JEWS, SAY HITLERITES

Japan's Withdrawal Spurs Decision in Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 20—The League of Nations has become "a forum for Jews and Marxists," and that is one of the reasons for Germany's decision to withdraw from it, according to a statement in the semi-official Wolff News Agency today. Another reason stated is "failure" of the disarmament conference.

The statement said the Sino-Japanese conflict had raised doubts everywhere about the league's efficacy and had hastened Ger-

"The League of Nations has lost the right to represent the civilized world because it has become an anti-Fascist mass meeting and a platform for Jewish and Marxistic petitions," the statement reads.

Mussolini to Seek New 4-Power Treaty

Geneva, Oct. 20 (UB)—Premier Mussolini of Italy will assume the role of European peacemaker in the crisis accentuated by Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations, it is believed here.

Mussolini's first move, it is declared, will be to invite Britain, France and Germany to a conference more embracing than the Locarno understanding of 1925.

Germany Still Bound to League, Say Officials

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 20 (AP)—League of nations officials emphasized today that Germany is bound indefinitely by the covenant of the League despite its resignation, since the covenant is a part of the Treaty of Versailles.

Japan resigned because the League assembly condemned her Manchurian policy. Germany announced her intention as a protest that the League has not done enough for her.

FISH TRAWLER CALLS AID

The ship was about 170 miles off Boston Light on the fishing banks.

The coast guard patrol boat Harriet E. Lane, of East Boston, was dispatched to tow the ship to Boston. A message to the owners stated the boat was drifting rapidly and requested immediate aid.

She was loaded with a large cargo of fish and was about to start for Boston when the engines became disabled.

Three Girls, 16, Held for Clothing Theft

The clothing was taken from the home of Mrs. Nora Fleming, Rose pl., South Boston, on Columbus Day. Police investigating the case rounded up two sisters and another girl.

Revolt Against NRA Plans Spreads in Midwest

Washington, Oct. 20 (INS)—Disturbing signs of revolt against the administration's far-flung recovery program were hoisted today along several sectors of the front where the fighting is keenest.

They have administration leaders distinctly worried.

In the strife-torn coal industry, particularly in Pennsylvania and Illinois, miners are battling between themselves, and within the owners of "Big Steel's captive mines.

Behind these disturbing factors is another, not so well organized, but potentially more dangerous than either—a revolt of the "little fellow," the small employer, who is finding tough sledding in adhering to conditions of the NRA in competition with "the big fellows.

For some days, NRA officials have been disturbed by the flight of the "little fellow" away from the Blue Eagle. Not much has been said about it, but quietly they have set to work to ascertain how compliance with the NRA can be made less onerous for the little man, confronted with rising overhead costs and a market that has not risen proportionately.

The administration is fighting the recovery battle on a dozen fronts, including NRA (National Recovery Act); the AAA (Agricultural Adjustment Administration); the PWA (Public Works Administration); the FERA (Federal Emergency Relief Administration); the CCC (Commodity Credit Corporation). Yet in the popular mind, the NRA epitomizes the whole program, and it is against this organization that most of the criticism is directed.

NRA officials hastened to explain today that the farm strike could not be laid at their door, as they have been concerned with the problems of industrial regulation, industrial re-employment, and industrial recovery generally.

Yet Gov. Bryan of Nebraska, Gov. Langer of North Dakota, and other critics blame the NRA for the plight in which the farmer finds himself. They insist the NRA has increased the cost of everything the farmer must buy, while failing to increase the return the farmer gets for his wheat, corn, hogs and cattle.

Morgan Will 'Obey' But Is Dubious

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—J. P. Morgan, America's most noted banker, was in a quandary about the new banking laws as he returned today from a sojourn of three months in Europe.

"It is the business of banks to obey the law," he said, "but I don't know yet what that means."

Morgan's interview was the first he ever granted to ship news reporters. He talked enthusiastically about improvement in England but declined to comment on the NRA or anything that had been going on in this country.

"Don't you see," he said, "I want to get rid of the water and talk to those who do know what's going on."

"Do you feel," he was asked, "that private bankers will have to concentrate on investment banking rather than commercial banking as the result of the new banking law?"

"When I went away three months ago," he replied, "I said I didn't know what the new laws meant and that we would have to find out first and then do whatever we are supposed to do."

He was told that another banker had stated the new banking law was "impossible" and would have to be rewritten.

"If it makes banking impossible, then it is hardly worth while to have banking, is it?" he said.

Morgan folded his hands in front of him and rubbed them around and around. A meerschaum pipe which he smoked was, he said, one of a "series that I keep going all the time."

He was extremely affable and frequently chuckled, often letting a chuckle stand as his only answer to a question. He explained his former reluctance to grant interviews with "I never could see the sense in seeing the boys when I had nothing to say." He added that he did want to be polite, however.

In declining to discuss any phase of the NRA he said, "I don't know enough about it."

"England is getting on very well," he said, "Improvement certainly is well set in there. The heavy industries are showing improvement and the whole feeling there is that things are better and improving."

Al Recalls He Was 1928 Candidate

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith testified in supreme court today that he had "a recollection" that he was the 1928 Democratic presidential candidate.

The former governor was a witness in the trial of a suit brought by the County Trust Company, of which Smith is chairman of the board, to recover $50,000 on a note signed by Timothy J. Mara, sports promoter, and $20,000 on a note signed by Patrick F. Kenny, plumbing contractor.

When Smith was asked by Joseph M. Proskauer, counsel for the bank, if he was the man who had been referred to in previous testimony as the 1928 Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Both Mara and Kenny have contended that they were told by the of the bank before his death in late James J. Riordan, president 1929, that they were to sign the notes merely as a formality.

Briton to Address N. E. College Groups

C. Douglas Booth of London, England, distinguished publicist, lecturer and authority on European affairs, will address a two-day conference of thirty-one New England university groups on Oct. 27 and 28, at the University of New Hampshire, under the direction of Professor Thorsten V. Kallarvi.

Among univer ties of New England which will be represented are Yale, Bates, University of Maine, Colby College, Boston University, Northeastern University, Harvard University, Radcliffe College, Tufts College, Smith College, Wheaton College, State Teachers College of Salem and others.

VETERAN SLASH TO TAKE HALF OFF PENSION

Boards Decide Many Disabilities Not Due to War Injuries

Copyright, 1933, by Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 20—Less than half the war veterans whose future benefit payments depend on proving their presumptive disabilities to be service connected today seemed in line for continued compensation.

Special boards of the veterans' administration have reviewed 50 per cent of the presumptive cases. Unofficial but closely checked figures showed only 40 per cent of this cross-section entitled to retain their benefits.

Brig.-Gen. Frank L. Hines, veterans administrator, has asked President Roosevelt to extend the Oct. 31 deadline for the boards to pass on the remainder of cases where compensation has been paid on the presumption the former soldiers contracted their disabilities during war service.

TO CONTINUE PAY

Such an extension would mean that veterans who have been getting 75 per cent of their former compensation since March 20, when the Economy Act was enacted, will continue to receive that amount beyond Oct. 31, until their cases are acted on.

President Roosevelt was expected to issue an extension order soon —possibly this week.

Although previous estimates of the presumptive cases have ranged as high as 150,000, a well-informed quarter today placed them at nearer 53,000.

TO NAME BOARD

Delays in organizing the boards were credited with having slowed up the work, which officials desire to complete before Congress convenes.

Conclusions of the review boards were awaited eagerly by veterans' organizations. Of particular importance to them was the personnel of the general board of review—the court of last appeal from decisions of the state groups—which was reported today to be ready for announcement next week. This appellate body will comprise six members from within the veterans' administration and nine from outside.

ICKES TO SPEED PUBLIC WORKS

Washington, Oct. 20—To speed up the public works program, Secretary Ickes and aides are planning to appoint immediately state inspectors who will assist state advisory boards in checking up and hurrying along construction projects.

No appointees have been chosen as yet by the public works administration but his deputy, Col. H. M. Wiate, is expected to have the setup ready within a few days.

The move was said by some officials to have resulted in part from numerous protests to the administration against delays in spreading over the country the actual cash from the $3,300,000,000 public works fund, over half of which already has been allocated.

BARBARA STANWYCK, SCREEN STAR, IN HOSPITAL HERE

Star at Osteopathic Hospital Plans Return to California

Following a week of personal appearances, played in agony, Miss Barbara Stanwyck (screen actress), is confined today at the Massachusetts Osteopathic Hospital, close to collapse. On the insistence of her physician, Dr. George M. Lane, she will remain several days for recuperation, before starting back for California.

The injury, aggravated by overwork and apparently accompanied by assorted worries, was suffered more than a year ago while Miss Stanwyck was working on the set of the film "Forbidden." Since then, on two occasions, she has been slightly injured, and these experiences, following strain during the failure of the musical comedy, "Tattle Tales," produced by Miss Stanwyck's husband, Frank Fay, have undermined her health.

WED IN HOLLYWOOD

It will be recalled that, following a successful career as a floor show performer, the now famed film star rose to stardom in the stage play "Burlesque."

While the play was at its height Miss Stanwyck became the wife of Frank Fay. During the period in which Miss Stanwyck won the admiration of her associates at the RKO Boston Theater by her courage in carrying on though suffering from injuries it was reported that her husband, Frank Fay, appearing at a Detroit theater, had "cancelled" his act. On that day Miss Stanwyck was close to collapse at the theater here.

The series of personal appearances which terminated with her Boston engagement came after an unhappy experience with a play called "Tattle Tales," which Fay organized and which is said to have lost close to $100,000.

BROUGHT PLAY TO FRONT

When the play closed he accepted other engagements involving many "cancellations." In the midst of the difficulties Miss Stanwyck gave up her activities in Hollywood, joined the cast of "Tattle Tales" and not only worked valiantly to put it over but succeeded in getting the production straightened out. Throughout this period she was under treatment.

'They Must Find My Baby'

Mrs. Thomas Nickerson of East Boston gazes nearly heartbroken upon a photograph as the law vainly searches for Jean Marie Sanders-Nickerson, kidnaped in court by her mother as the child was awarded to Mrs. Nickerson. Today the kidnap mother, Mrs. Eunice Patrone, was found by the Boston Evening American, but she had hidden the little girl.

SOCIETY FOLKS FIGHT OVER DIVORCE

Collusion Question Will Be Settled by U. S. Courts

The appeal of Mrs. Harriet Frothingham against a $5000 judgment awarded to her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Anthony, on the claim the latter's divorce from her son, now dead, was obtained through collusion, has been taken under advisement by the U. S. Court of Appeals.

It was brought out at a hearing that when Mrs. Anthony and her husband, Andrew W. Anthony, son of Mrs. Frothingham by a former marriage, contemplated divorces in 1927, Mrs. Frothingham entered into an agreement with her daughter-in-law.

By the terms of this agreement, Mrs. Frothingham was to make certain payments for the education of the Anthony children and the expenses of the divorce action in the event Mrs. Anthony did not sue for alimony.

After the divorce had been secured, Mrs. Frothingham refused to make the agreed payments. When sued by Mrs. Anthony she claimed the agreement was illegal inasmuch as it was executed to facilitate the divorce and was therefore collusive.

Mrs. Anthony brought suit for $10,000 in federal court here and was awarded a verdict of $5000. Mrs. Frothingham appealed and the case came before the circuit court of appeals yesterday and was finally taken under advisement.

CARDINAL HAPPY TO GET HOME, HALE, RESTED

Party Arrives on N. Y. Boat; Message Is to Be Issued Later

Cardinal O'Connell arrived in Boston today from his six weeks' sojourn in Italy, in fine health and refreshed from his ocean voyage.

There was no public welcome as he reached here because he had not revealed the time of his arrival.

The Cardinal arrived in New York yesterday on the Italian liner Vulcania, and came up to Boston overnight on the Eastern Steamship liner New York, arriving at India Wharf about 7 o'clock.

AUDIENCE WITH POPE

Cardinal O'Connell went directly to his residence on Commonwealth ave., Brighton, and rested a while before going to his office to take up various things which had accumulated during his absence and required his personal attention.

Through Father Phelan he declined to see newspapermen to issue a message in his first but indicated he would do so tomorrow.

On arriving at New York he made a brief shout his trip, telling the reporters that he had been honored with a long audience with Pope Pius and had found the Holy Father perfectly well and active.

IN PHYSICAL TRIM

He spoke of Mussolini's "magic power" in improving physical conditions, including the reclamation of the ancient Pontine marshes for farm land, the elimination of unattractive features of life in Naples and the reconstruction of the famous roads of the Roman Empire into excellent highways.

Personally, the Cardinal said he was in the finest physical condition he had known in the past 20 years. His entire vacation was unmarred by rainy weather.

Welcomed Back to Boston

Cardinal O'Connell, as he returned home today on the New York boat after an absence of weeks abroad—mostly in Rome. He brought back to Boston the blessings of Pope Pius and words of good cheer for the future. (Boston American photos.)

WIDOW PLEADS NOLO IN DEATH TRIAL

Mrs. Beatrice Lee Changes Plea; Jailed Awaiting Sentence

Providence, Oct. 20—Taking of testimony in the trial of Milton L. Dexter for the slaying of Foster R. Simmons, of Central Falls, last Dec. 20, resumes today, before Judge Philip Joslin in Superior Court.

Yesterday's session, devoted mainly to arguments over the admissibility of alleged confessions made by Dexter and Mrs. Beatrice Lee, 45-year-old divorcee, who is charged with being an accessory, was climaxed by the latter's change of plea.

Just after the jury filed from the courtroom at the end of the session, Mrs. Lee stepped to the clerk's desk in front of Judge Joslin, and one of her attorneys informed the court she wished to retract her plea of not guilty and plead nolo.

Atty.-Gen. Hartigan objected to acceptance of the plea unless it was made directly. Judge Joslin turned to her and asked her if she wished to plead nolo.

"Yes," she answered, "nolo."

Judge Joslin accepted the plea and ordered her remanded to jail without bail. She will not be a state witness and will be brought up for sentence after Dexter's trial is completed.

Testimony yesterday was given by Deputy Police Chief George Andrews of Central Falls, who gave Dexter's confession after it had been admitted as evidence, and told how the alleged slayer re-enacted the crime for police.

The alleged confessions of Dexter and Mrs. Lee revealed the brutal manner in which Simmons was slain and his body hidden and the efforts of Mrs. Lee, with whom Dexter had been living, to get money to help him.

Young Du Pont Is Gridiron Victim

50,000 LOTTERY SLIPS FOUND

Worcester, Oct. 20—The alleged main headquarters of this city's nigger pool operations was raided by local police who arrested five men and seized 50,000 alleged pool slips.

The raid was staged shortly after dark, and, according to the police, the five men were seated in the headquarters at 271 Harrington way. In addition to the alleged pool slips police seized three adding machines.

New Plan Rules Shoe Plant

Brockton, Oct. 20—An overwhelming victory for the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen over the rival Boot and Shoe Workers' Union was gained here when 883 employes of the George E. Keith Co., voted to choose their representatives in collective bargaining.

A total of 736 employes voted in favor of the Brotherhood while only eight votes were cast for the Boot and Shoe union. There were 115 voting for an open shop and a few scattered votes for other means of representation.

GIRL TO REVEAL KELLY HIDEOUT

Chicago, Oct. 20—Geraldine Arnold, 12, whose information to federal officers led to the capture of George ("Machine Gun") Kelly and his wife, Kathryn, in Memphis, Tenn., was here today to testify before a federal grand jury.

Her testimony is expected to be against Joseph Ec gi, garage owner, charged with obstructing justice by harboring Kelly and his wife during their stay in this city last September.

Geraldine was taken by the Kellys about the country as a blind during the time they were fugitives. While here they are said to have been directed to a hideout by Bergl. The little girl was brought here by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Arnold, whom the Kellys picked up while the Arnold family was hitch-hiking.

WRITS REFUSED 2 CANDIDATES

Two petitions for writs of mandamus, seeking to compel the Boston election commissioners to place names of two more candidates on the Boston municipal ballot for next month's elections, were dismissed today in supreme court by Judge Fred T. Field.

One petition was by former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, declared by the election commissioners to have filed an insufficient number of "good" names on his nomination papers as a candidate for mayor.

The other was by Ralph Del Gaudio, of the West End, rejected, for the same reason, by the election commissioners as a candidate for the city council from that district.

In dismissing the petitions, Judge Field said the statute provides that all questions relating to nomination papers for elections in Boston shall be submitted to the Ballot Law Commission, over which Chief Justice Bolster, of municipal court, has jurisdiction.

URGE RECOUNT IN MEDFORD

Joseph L. Fitzpatrick, former Medford purchasing agent, who lost out in the mayoralty primary by a margin of 337 votes, will file a petition in today for a recount.

Fitzpatrick's supporters assert that when the ballots were tabulated, with the names of Herbert J. Burke and Mayor John H. Burke both being counted, insufficient distinction was made in checking.

They say that many votes for Herbert J. Burke were credited to Mayor Burke.

They point out that when Herbert J. Burke ran for alderman-at-large two years ago he received several thousand votes, but as a mayoralty candidate this year was credited with only 315, and they charge ballots that should have been credited to him on the tally sheets were given to Mayor Burke.

Supporters of Mayor Burke say they have no fear of a recount, that it will show a larger vote for him. Mayor Burke finished second in the race of seven, being topped by Rep. John J. Irwin by 13 votes.

BROKER HANGS HIMSELF

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Herbert B. Lederer, broker husband of Isabel Leighton, biographer of President Roosevelt, hanged himself in his apartment at 1045 Park ave. today.

Lederer was 44 years old and employed since 1931 as a customer's man by the brokerage firm of Edward B. Smith & Co.

His body was found by a maid when she went to the apartment to prepare breakfast for Lederer and his wife. The body hung from the kitchen transom by an electric light cord.

Miss Leighton, who resigned as head of the NRA drive recently, was appointed vice-chairman of the citizens' committee for Joseph V. McKee, Independent Democratic candidate for mayor.

Police said she was asleep when she found Lederer's body.

MINOT BEGINS HIS DEFENSE

Maj. Wayland M. "Dono" Minot, former star Harvard fullback, opened his defense today in federal court in the trial of two $15,000 suits brought against him and Alessandro Maroni, of Somerville, as a result of a fatal automobile chase last January on Craigie Bridge.

The suits were brought by Mrs. Lucille Todd of New Jersey, whose husband, a guest of Minot, was killed in the accident.

In opening for Minot, his counsel, Edward J. Sullivan, declared the former gridiron star was a victim of circumstances and was not to blame for the accident which occurred when Maroni, in attempting to avoid a car passing on his right, swerved and struck the rear of the Minot car, which was passing on the left.

A number of Minot defense witnesses were sworn, including Mrs. Anna M. Minot, whom the football star won as his bride more than two decades ago as a climax of a gridiron romance.

One Test Holds Up

Fairmont, W. Va., Oct. 20—Postmaster Harry Engle gave several persons counterfeit $10 bills and asked them to try to pass them at the post office just as a test. Not one got by.

TEN RELATIVES CUT BY WILL

Resentment at the failure of a brother and sister and eight nieces and nephews to care for him is expressed in the will of Luke Conley, filed in Middlesex Court, which bequeaths the bulk of a $20,000 personal estate to five Catholic institutions.

The brother and sister are left $100 each and the others cut off without a cent. The pastor of St. Bridget's Church, Framingham, is left $3000 toward the erection of a new church.

The will provides the remainder is to be divided in four equal parts to be distributed to the Carney Hospital, Little Sisters of the Poor, Society for the Propagation of the Faith and the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of Maryknoll, N. Y.

High School Youth Loses Three Fingers

Plymouth, Oct. 20—Joseph Costa, 15, of Cherry st., North Plymouth, was confined to his bed today as a result of an injury which cost him three fingers of his left hand. The youth caught his hand in a circular saw while working in the manual training rooms of the junior high school and had three fingers amputated.

'Twas Some Window Show Till Police Car Skidded

"That'll bring 'em in," he told a clerk. And it did!

First comer was Cambridge Police Capt. Edward J. Welch. He came right through the window, automobile and all. Neither the window nor the police prowl car will be quite the same again, but Capt. Welch escaped with minor scratches. Capt. Welch had skidded, attempting to avoid collision with a truck.

The drugstore is located at 358 Huron ave., Cambridge. The police car, festooned with hot water bottles and bapized with toilet lotions, had to be hauled from the wrecked window by a tow truck.

COURT BATTLE THREATENED OVER MAYORAL PARLEY

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

A legal battle over the right of the Democratic City Committee to meet in convention next Saturday night to endorse a candidate for mayor is threatened.

A legal battle over the right of the Democratic City Committee to meet in convention next Saturday night to endorse a candidate for mayor is threatened.

Chairman John W. Newman of the committee admitted today that intimations have come to him that a group of citizens, whose names he did not disclose, are considering the advisability of petitioning the supreme court for an order to restrain him from going through with the meeting.

Newman further divulged that the basis of the group's protest is that a meeting of the Democratic City Committee for the purpose of endorsing a Democrat for mayor would be in violation of the city charter which calls for a non-partisan election.

Asked if the threat will affect his decision to hold the convention, Newman said:

"Not in the least. We are going through with it. Credentials have already been mailed to the 400 members of the committee and our plans are completed."

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley's campaign, backed by the powerful organization of Mayor Curley, continued to surge on today with the Suffolk county officer due to invade East Boston, the section where Frederick W. Mansfield was raised, tonight.

In a fighting mood today, the district attorney stated at his headquarters that the battle is now cleancut between "a straight out-and-out Democrat and a disciple of Goo-Gooism."

WARNS OF PAYROLLS

"The Democracy of Boston," he continued, "is faced with the necessity of endorsing the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt. And that endorsement can only come through the election of a real Democrat to the office of mayor. My chief opponent (Mansfield) was a Democratic office holder by mistake.

"No effort of his in any way caused Boston to become a Democratic city and the state one of those enrolled in the party ranks. The Democratic platform upon which President Roosevelt was elected called for an administration which would restore prosperity to a depression-ridden nation. I subscribed to that platform and today my platform calls for an administration which will restore prosperity to depression-ridden Boston."

The district attorney issued the warning that if the Goo Goos triumph there'll be no restoration of payroll cuts and that hundreds of men will be dropped from the rolls.

LAWLOR REPUDIATED

Continuing on the defensive, Candidate Mansfield repudiates the support of Henry Lawlor, recently let out by the city law department.

"One of the men who entirely unsolicited on my part announced that he would vote for me was Henry F. Lawlor," Mansfield declared in a statement. "My opponents have seized upon his announcement to charge me with an anti-Jewish feeling because Mr. Lawlor wrote a letter many months ago which was taken by my fellow Jewish citizens as an insult to their race.

"Mr. Lawlor has no official connection with my campaign nor did he ever have any connection with it and I disavow and reject any support which comes from bigots or which is based on intolerance."

Members of the Boston election commission are summoned to appear before the supreme court today in connection with a writ seeking to insure the name of Alonzo B. Cook going on the ballot for mayor. Cook was counted out by the commission, shy of 20 of the required number of certified names on his nomination papers.

At City Hall, representatives of former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols' campaign committee, with a hand writing expert, are examining the signatures on the Mansfield papers. Papers of all the candidates are now open for public inspection.

ATTACKS CURLEY MOVE

The commission has certified 120 candidates for the city council from the 22 wards.

All but former Mayor Nichols and Councillor Coakley of the seven mayoralty candidates addressed more than 600 members of the City Club there. Former Congressman O'Connell declared "Goo-goo bosses were just as bad as the others" and that all political bosses were against him.

Judge Sullivan declared he would appeal to the Legislature for a change in the city charter whether he was elected or not. Senator Parkman claimed he was the only candidate who had presented a plan for the next four years.

Dist. Atty. Foley complimented Senator Parkman for his fairness in voting in the Legislature for a run-off primary. Atty. Mansfield warned the underworld would rule Boston for the next four years if voters used their ballots for candidates without a chance of election.

Tonight over the radio former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell is scheduled to discuss the endorsement of Dist. Atty. Foley by Mayor Curley.

"This is merely in keeping with my policy of letting the voters of Boston know what is going on in the so-called 'inner political circle' of bosses and political machines," he explained.

Former Rep. Charles S. Sullivan of Charlestown, son of the local presiding judge of the district court, as was forecast several days ago, has come out publicly for Mansfield.

DEMOCRAT FOR WHITE

Senator Joseph White of Ward 19, Jamaica Plain, says he is still undecided as to what candidate he will endorse. He declared emphatically, however, that he will not support a Republican.

Sen. Parkman led the other mayoralty candidates in a test vote of the situation taken last night at a meeting of the women's division of the Republican City Committee at Hotel Bellevue.

Eighty-three votes were cast and the results were: Parkman, 43, Nichols, 28; Mansfield, 8; and 1 each for Cook, Foley, O'Connell and Sullivan.

Referring to his "so-called making-up" with Mayor Curley, Daniel H. Coakley said that while he is too old now to bear personal grudges or to harbor resentment, he and the mayor are still as far apart politically as they have ever been. He predicted that he and the mayor will have many more battles in the future.

HOUGHTON'S

HOUGHTON & DUTTON TREMONT AT BEACON . . . BOSTON

FOES STUMPED BY QUIGLEY SILENCE

Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley, who used to make so much noise in a Chelsea campaign, is according his opponents silent treatment now, and thereby keeping fuel on the flames of political excitement over Tuesday's non-partisan primaries.

Quigley is "hatling" for his sixth term in this curous fashon. He has not made a public address, radio speech or even appeals ay cards and posters or advertising, up to now.

It is generally believed he will break loose at the big "night before" rally at the armory but he doesn't promise to do so.

Everybody but the Chelsea mayor admits he has a fight on his hands in the opposition of ex-Mayor John J. Whalen and Rep. William H. Melley. Both are "whacking" Quigley, while he turns the other cheek.

Whalen has been mayor twice and is the only man who ever beat Quigley for that post.

Melley, a young lawyer and Boston College graduate, made a good showing in the last mayoral primaries and has never been beaten for state representative. He is serving his second term on Beacon Hill.

Other candidates for mayor are Joseph Butler, "NRA candidate," Harry V. Sokol, Communist, and Harry A. Freedman, workers' candidate, who are enlivening the campaign. The two highest of the six candidates at the primaries will fight it out at the final election.

There are 64 aspirants seeking nominations for mayor, alderman-at-large, ward alderman and school committee. Only thirty can be successful, and only 15 finally elected.

Only one woman is in the field. She is Mrs. Hattie F. Solomon, running for school committee in ward four, opposed by Raymond Carter and Timothy Kane.

Ward three presents a tense battle in the school board race, with Lawrence Brennan, brother of former Alderman John Brennan, and four others engaged in an open fight, due to the fact that the present incumbent is not running.

Sixteen men are seeking eight nominations as aldermen-at-large, but the contest really settles down to a battle for the post being vacated by President Joseph Israelite, who is retiring to devote time to business. The other three aldermen-at-large, Frederick C. Holland, Samuel Falkof and James F. Shannon, seek re-election.

Mayor Quigley is introducing an innovation this year, having decided to use police lieutenants and sergeants as wardens at the various precincts, in the interests of honesty and economy.

Duce's Paper Scorns Otto Wedding Rumor

Milan, Italy, Oct. 20 (INS)—Recent revelations that the highest Italian circles opposed a rumored match between Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne and the Italian princess, Maria, were borne out today by an editorial in Mussolini's own newspaper ridiculing possibility of the marriage.

Referring to the "colossal absurdity" of the marriage rumor, the paper said: "The news that Master Otto is against Fascism leaves us completely indifferent."

Coleman Gets Yale Post

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 20—The appointment of John Coleman, Jr., Yale 1913, of Lake Forest, Ill., as assistant treasurer of Yale University, was announced.

Foley Win Indicated in Straw Ballot Test

A close race for mayor, with chances favoring the election of District Attorney William J. Foley, is indicated by the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser postcard poll of registered Democratic voters.

More than 18,600 registered Democratic voters took part in the test. By their postcard ballots these voters have influenced the Mayoralty campaign.

CURLEY FOR FOLEY

Mayor Curley has declared for Dist. Atty. Foley and he did so, he said in his public statement, because Mr. Foley showed the preponderant strength in the Straw Ballot Test Election.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell requested his adherents to mail their ballots in order that his measure of strength might be fully demonstrated.

Former State Treasurer Frederick W. Mansfield was in the habit of calling for his copy of the Boston Evening American in order that he could scan the latest returns as he formulated his campaign day by day.

Ex-Mayor Nichols, a Republican, had expressed his satisfaction that ballots were being marked in his favor by the Democratic voters and that they were published regularly in these columns.

Governor's Councillor Daniel H. Coakley is said to have felt that the straw ballot did not reflect his true strength because of the absence of his printed name from the ballot. Mr. Coakley was a late entrant and the voters with whom he earned favor had to write his name in the space reserved for that purpose at the bottom of the ballot. The same condition applied, of course, to ex-Mayor Nichols and to Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., who, like Mr. Nichols, is a Republican.

Judge Michael H. Sullivan made no public comment upon the Straw Ballot, but he is understood to have been disappointed by his failure to register more ballots in the favor of the Democratic voters.

Veteran political leaders like John F. Fitzgerald and Joseph P. Lomasney have withheld the formal declarations of their support for any candidate, as they scrutinized the daily returns and waited to form their final conclusions.

FOLEY WELL IN LEAD

The purpose of the Straw Ballot Election Test was to enable the registered Democratic voters of Boston to answer the question by their own votes, "Who is the strongest Democratic candidate for Mayor of Boston?"

Boston is a Democratic city. The majorities of Democratic candidates for President, United States Senator and Governor have averaged 100,000. Concededly, any Democratic aspirant who could command the support of his constituents could be regarded as reasonably certain of election.

The returns will have to speak for themselves and command the diagnosis which any reader may make of them to his own satisfaction. The latest returns were as follows:

William J. Foley	8195
Frederick W. Mansfield	5634
Joseph F. O'Connell	3241
Malcolm E. Nichols	1002
Daniel H. Coakley	261
Michael H. Sullivan	241
Henry Parkman, Jr.	154

Several thousand voters marked their ballots either for candidates who decided to retire fro the contest or for other persons they seemed to prefer rather than the actual and avowed candidates for mayor.

The postcard ballots were voted by over 10 per cent of the registered Democratic voters in every ward and in every section of the city. The experience of Straw Ballots in the past has shown by 10 per cent may be regarded as an accurate reflection of the public sentiment. Multiplying the returns by 10, allowing for an increased registration, and eliminating the Republican vote gives the experts the figures they desire.

U. S. WILL TAX LIQUOR ALL IT WILL BEAR

Washington, Oct. 20 (INS)—A congressional policy of taxing liquor "all the traffic will bear" with repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was forecast today as the special House ways and means sub-committee named to seek new sources of taxation prepared to open an official investigation.

Chairman Samuel B. Hill (D.) of Washington, of the sub-committee, announced the question of liquor will be the first considered when the sub-committee begins new sessions Monday.

While Hill declined to predict the revenue which may be obtained from liquor and wines, Rep. Isaac Bacharach of New Jersey, veteran Republican member of the ways and means committee, predicted that liquor, wine and beer will yield $1,000,000,000 annually.

"Our experts have been working on the question of liquor taxation all summer long to aid the committee in stopping up leaks in the revenue laws," said Hill.

"There are two questions: What tax will produce the greatest amount of revenue, and at what point shall we stop to discourage bootlegging?

"I think Congress will want to levy a tax as high as we can, to produce revenue and to avoid encouragement of illicit manufacture of liquor. It really is an actural question."

Bacharach expressed belief that Congress may fix the tax about $3 a gallon, as compared to the existing tax of $1.10.

Hill forecast a determination on the part of Congress to use the tariff on liquor to prevent discrimination against American trade by Great Britain, Canada, the Irish Free State, France, Spain and Italy —all producers of whiskey and wine.

Boy Drowns, Cry for Aid Ignored

A half dozen motorists who only slowed down and grinned at a running, shouting, naked boy in River st., Neponset, yesterday, may learn here for the first time that had they stopped, they might have saved a life.

John Pappapopoulos, 12, of Norfolk st., Mattapan, drowned in the Neponset river with the upset of a makeshift boat while his companion, Edwin Lewin, 12, of Stanton st., ran up the highway shouting for help.

Several motorists passed Lewin by, misunderstanding his cries for aid. He finally gained the attention of two smelt fishermen, Thomas and Robert Crawford of Granville st., Dorchester, who dived for an hour before the body was recovered.

1 DIES, 10 FLEE FACTORY FIRE

Leominster, Oct. 20—Spontaneous combustion of celluloid dust is believed today to have caused the explosion and fire which destroyed three buildings of the Standard Pyroxo-Loid Co., Niles st., and caused the death of one man.

The victim, Henry J. Sheehan, 57, of West st., a foreman, was trapped in the cellar of the first floor building. Firemen recovered his body after the flames were brought under control.

According to the medical examiner he died of suffocation.

Ten girls, who were working in the same building, ran out when they saw smoke. They escaped from the building without difficulty and remained nearby to watch firemen.

CODE PARADERS DEFY CHILL AIR

Frosty weather failed to dampen the ardor of thousands of veterans, school children and members of civic and fraternal organizations who took part in spectacular NRA parades in Norwood and Arlington.

In Arlington the NRA program will be continued today with a series of band concerts and various contests sponsored by business organizations.

Norwood's parade was the largest ever held there with more than 8000 in the line of march. More than 80 floats, entered in the parade, added a touch of color to the line of march.

In Arlington more than 2000 were in the line of march and there were more than a score of floats.

After the parade had passed the reviewing stand, occupied by state and town officials, there was a mass meeting at Town Hall, at which speakers discussed the NRA program.

UNIVERSALISTS BACK MERGER

Worcester, Oct. 20—Dissolving differences in the ranks of its delegates, the general convention of the Universalist Church accepted the Free Church of America proposition.

Two amendments to the plan for associating with the Unitarian Church made the harmony possible. These provided for the revision of the Free Church constitution's preamble on a theistic basis and for reconsideration of the name.

The revision of the preamble will restrict membership in the federation to those "who would work for the kingdom of God in the spirit of Jesus." As originally drawn, the preamble made no mention of a Deity.

Pair Sent to Chair for Woman Torture

Newton, Ill., Oct. 20 — In the first death penalty ever inflicted in the history of this country, a jury has condemned Harry Shelby and his nephew, John Allen, to the electric chair.

They were convicted of the torture murder of Mrs. Mary Shrader, 82, Aug. 29.

Three men invaded the home of Mrs. Schrader and her 54-year-old brother, Bernard Weldom in search of money. They beat and tortured the two.

Nationwide Hunt for Cahill Halted

Middlesex County authorities stated today that the nationwide hunt for Harry P. Cahill, missing Somerville and Lawrence war veteran, sought in connection with the slaying of Peggy McCarthy, 10, was temporarily halted, pending the receipt of more definite clues.

Home Life in Europe

—BY ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Each home has a two-tank garage with a bomb-proof cellar and a room lined with concrete.

She's glad it ain't the enemy.

All you require in a setting like that is a spark. And the fire will get worse when the firemen dash up wearing celluloid collars.

East Boston Squirrel Eludes Capture

Scores of East Boston children went to school puffing today and it wasn't because they didn't want to be late.

The answer was a frightened but agile little squirrel that appeared in bennington st., and easily outdistanced its youthful pursuers in a race that led into London st., and a 75-car garage.

Even then the little animal foiled capture, much to the chagrin of John Fitta, of Bennington st., and John Caputo of Gladstone st., garage employes.

Ulm Clips Flight Time to Australia

Derby, West Australia, Oct. 20—Charles T. P. Ulm and three companions arrived here early today and established a new record for a flight from England.

The quartet completed their journey from England in six days, 17 hours and 45 minutes, thereby beating by 11 hours the mark of Wing-Commander Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith.

Morphine Peddler Starts for Prison

Angelo Quercia, of Somerville, sentenced in Federal court yesterday to seven years in the Lewisburg, Pa., federal penitentiary after being found guilty of selling five ounces of morphine in 1931, left here today to begin his term.

It was the second time he was found guilty, the first conviction having been set aside by the Supreme Court.

Hendy Resigns as Curator of Museum

The Board of Turstees of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts has accepted with regret the resignation of Philip Hendy as curator of paintings at the Museum. His resignation was read and accepted at the quarterly meeting of the board.

He had been curator since 1930. The resignation was sent here from London where Hendy has been for several months.

BRITAIN MOVES TO SAFEGUARD HONGKONG

London, Oct. 20 (INS)—A sensation was caused here today by publication in the London Evening Standard and the Evening Star of the following Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Hong Kong:

"Owing to the increasing naval tension in the Pacific, naval and military authorities at Hong Kon gare taking steps to safeguard the city, and as the first step naval and air forces will be placed on an improved basis."

The dispatch then gave the new defense plans in detail, pointing out that both Hong Kong and Singapore, principal British naval bases in the Far East, are open to aerial attack.

SEQUEL TO BEATTY SPEECH

The sensation was heightened when the Star entirely eliminated the dispatch from its second edition appearing at 2:30 this afternoon. It published the dispatch in its second edition but also eliminated it entirely in its 3:30 p. m. edition.

Publication of the dispatch came hard on the heels of a sensational speech by Earl Beatty, admiral of the fleet, who issued a sharp warning against Britain's "waning naval power."

"Our standard of naval strength," he told the Navy league, "on one hand is insufficient to make us an attractive ally and play our part as a great world power, thereby promoting restoration of international confidence, and on the other hand is insufficient to guarantee free passage at sea of our ships."

LONDON PUZZLED

London was at a loss to understand the allusion to "increasing naval tension" mentioned in the Exchange telegraph dispatch. The only points at issue between Great Britain and Japan in recent weeks have been the dumping of Japanese goods in India and pointed editorials in influential Australian newspapers inveighing against Japanese "imperialism."

British Criticised for Anti-U. S. Navy Advice

Washington, Oct. 19 (USI)—The Navy League of the United States today called upon Great Britain to cease its attempts to dictate the naval policy of this government.

In an open letter to the Navy League of the British Empire, the American organization "frankly and candidly" warned that Britain's attitude is turning public opinion in the United States against a closer understanding between the two nations.

The action of Sir John Simon in protesting the building of the 10,000-ton six-inch gun cruisers recently ordered as a step toward building the American navy up to treaty strength, was bitterly assailed.

Threat to Lawrence Policeman Charged

Lawrence, Oct. 20—Edward Casey, 23, of Kansas City, was held in $300 today following the appeal of a $100 fine imposed by Judge Frederic N. Chandler in district court here on a charge of operating under the influence of liquor. A drunkenness complaint was dropped.

Reserve Officer Thomas Powers testified that when he stopped the Casey machine on the night of Oct. 12, a passenger in the car threatened to throw him in the river, "because this is a small town."

Canadian Exports Increase

Ottawa, Oct. 20—The Dominion bureau of statistics reported an increase of 15 per cent in Canada's exports to British Empire countries.

Safety Islands Found Safer Than Corners

Now it seems that Cambridge's "safety islands" are not such death-dealing things after all.

In fact, a report made to Mayor Russell today by the Governor's committee on street and highway safety indicates that, in spite of their toll of more than 300 accidents, they are harmless, compared with many a street intersection in the University City.

An "accident map" indicates that one runs a far better chance of being nudged by a 10-ton truck or a roadster if one decides to cross a street on the Central sq. or East Cambridge areas.

The committee also found that Cambridge's street intersections are veritable magnets for motor collisions despite the fact that most motor accidents in the rest of the world occur in the middle of the block.

During the last 20 months there have been no less than 134 accidents at the corner of Broadway and Prospect st. At the Bridge st.-Commercial ave. corner is a close second with 53. Memorial drive and Brookline st. (Cottage Farm bridge) ties with Massachusetts ave. and Alewife Brook parkway with 27 each. Harvard sq. saw 24 crashes. And almost a dozen other crossings averaged a little less than one a month.

The committee is now studying the crash causes and will then rack its brains to see what can be done to prevent at least some of them.

Wiley Post Ends His Spectacular Flying

New York, Oct. 20—Wiley Post received aviation's tribute at a belated testimonial dinner and announced he was "disgusted with the spectacular phase of flying."

Post, who flew around the world in the record-breaking time of seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes, said he planned to confine his activities henceforth in the "practical development of aviation, without ballyhoo."

Trouserless Youth Just a Frat Stunt

Royal Oak, Mich., Oct. 20—A trouserless youth dashed out of an abandoned house and scurried down the main street. Then came another, and another. Crowds collected.

Police discovered Detroit City College sophomores had imprisoned freshmen in the house, departing with their clothes.

MILLION MORE FOR BAY STATE

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—The Public Works Administration today allotted $5,243,375 for 44 non-federal construction projects in 21 states which officials said would provide 53,807 man-months of quick, direct employment.

The allotments included:

Massachusetts—Monson, for sewers, $65,000; for storage building, $112,000; Waltham, electric cable system, $12,000; Natick, building, $114,000; Amherst, improvement and building, $121,000; Framingham, school, $34,000; police barracks, $218,320; Northampton, two hospitals, $348,000.

Homeless Wife Seeks Divorce

Plymouth, Oct. 20—Claiming to be homeless as a result of her husband's alleged cruelty, Mrs. Emma Wilbur, of Lakeville, filed a separate support petition in Probate court. She charged that John Wilbur evicted her from their home in the winter of 1932 and has not allowed her to live in it since. She seeks custody of their children.

Mustache Out by Time Court Called

Cincinnati, Oct. 20—A man with a mustache robbed Frank Smith, Harry Anglin, 24, was taken into custody. During a night in jail he pulled out his mustache, using his fingers for tweezers. The robbery victim has yet to attempt to identify him.

The Keyhole on the News

Tenacious

Although Gene "Red" Record, Harvard track and football star, is now a hard working medical school student and temporarily, at least, out of the athletic limelight, they still tell stories about him along the banks of the limpid Charley river.

It seems the one teacher or instructor who ever caught that lightning Record intellect momentarily napping was a lady pedagogue out Brookline way in Gene's callow youth.

She'd seen the brilliant Red day dreaming—maybe of future Harvard varsity triumphs—so often that she began to be a bit more than a trifle irritated.

Gene, even as a schoolboy, was too well-grounded in his studies to be caught by the ordinary classroom interrogation, so the lady teacher tried a surprise.

In the midst of a general class recitation she demanded:

"How many tails is it, Gene Record, that a cat is popularly supposed to have?"

Unnecessary

James M. Curley's official endorsement of Dist.-Atty. Bill Foley as the Democratic party's leading candidate for mayor came only as a tardy vindication of the judgment of Messrs. Harry Ross and Morris Isenberg, Boston department store executives.

Isenberg, who isn't familiar with Boston's past political history, insisted Foley was a Republican.

Ross, better informed, stuck to it that the D. A. was a Democrat. He proved it to his friend and rival Isenberg at a radio rally this week.

"Listen to this man, Foley," said Ross. "He pronounces radio like Al Smith, 'raddio.' He must be a Democrat."

Diplomatic

Wrestler Bull Martin and his grappler colleague, the lately solved "Black Secret," Leo Numa, are good friends off the mat and eat together frequently at Boston hotels and restaurants—invariably arguing about who shall have the privilege of paying the dinner check.

One such oh-let-me-do-it, no-oh-let-me-do-it debate, staged between Martin and Numa at the Hotel Manger, attracted the attention of Al Monteith, ex-B. C. football guard and wrestler in his own right.

Al is by no means a pal of Bull Martin's. Al was, therefore, more than usually irked by the Alphonse-and-Gaston Martin-Numa argument.

He therefore approached the table of the latter two grunt-and-grapple moguls, and addressed Numa:

"Hey, Leo," he said. "If that push-over insists on rewing about who pays this bill, just toss him for it, guy, just toss him for it."

Impromptu

Comedian Jack Benny, in a recent Boston appearance, took it rather to heart that his act was billed in a theater that was catering to a depression-wounded box office by running a "continuous show" and permitting late patrons of one performance to remain for the next—and so on to exhaustion.

Jack didn't care for the kind of audience that came in "to get out of the cold and catch up on sleep," and he wasn't hesitant in saying so.

And yet—

Among the sure-fire Benny laughs was one that was scheduled to come when Jack, doing a clever imitation of Ted Lewis, demanded "Who'm I impersonatin' now, boys, who'm I impersonatin' now?"

The answer, coming from a planted helper in the balcony, was always, "Greta Garbo."

It went wrong one evening, though, when the balcony "plant," having looked upon the bathtub gin while it was more than usually white and deadly, failed to be able to climb to his accustomed perch.

Jack Benny did his Ted Lewis imitation, shouted his usual question and waited for the come-back and the ensuing guffaw. No come-back. No guffaw. And the Ted Lewis impersonation of itself was not so hot. Jack was getting worried. Once more he asked his cue question.

"Who'm I impersonatin' now, boys, who'm I impersonatin' now?"

And in the uppermost gallery, just in time to save the situation from a fiasco, a stay-over seat occupant, stirring from his chronic drowsiness, came to the rescue.

"Greta Garbo!" he shouted, but he didn't wait for the laugh that followed.

He went back to sleep.

Now that the races at Rockingham are over for the season, Judge Day, of South Boston, hopes his wife will get as interested in football or ice hockey as she was in the "hosses." Rockingham was a great help to the judge in tactfully entertaining himself from afternoon appointments. "I'm sorry" he'd say—and truthfully—"but Mrs. Day is downstairs in the car, waiting for me to drive her to the races." Nobody, under those circumstances, could ask a judge to hang around and talk business. Now Rockingham is no help, any more, so the Harvard stadium and the Garden skating rink will have to do duty in their turn . . .

ABC RADICALS SEEK TO FORCE CUBAN CRISIS

Havana, Oct. 20—Threats of a new crisis faced the troubled regime of President Ramon Grau San Martin today.

They loomed in the prospect of an impending break away by the militant and powerful ABC radical society—one of Grau's strongest supporting arms when he took up the reins after the overthrow of Carlos Manuel De Cespedes.

They were intensified by reports of unrest bred of labor difficulties throughout the island, the spread to 84 of malaria cases in the city of Havana, trouble concerning imprisonment of officers captured in the National Hotel battle.

"The ABCR (not to be confused with the ABC, student organization of which it is an offshoot) is disgusted with the government's proceedings," said Armando Rodas, the leader.

"It lent its support disinterestedly and got nothing from the participation. Now it is withdrawing."

Meanwhile, further emphasizing the government's difficulties, a spokesman for the Nationalists announced they refused "all participation and responsibility in the government."

The newspaper Informaciones editorially declared "a popular clamor demands" the release of officers imprisoned on the Isle of Pines.

Other newspapers printed a letter from Senator Borah of Idaho to President Grau which said:

Cubans Ready to Attack American Marines

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Oct. 20—American marines will have to enter Havana soon and when they do it will be in the smoke of enemy weapons.

Never before have the marines been met with violence when ordered into Cuba.

There will be no intervention, but within a month occupation will in all probability become necessary. Looting will begin and when the robbing of American shops, warehouses and homes starts the marines must be landed.

Today the food supply in Havana is small and growing smaller. Merchants get no credits from foreign merchants and are stocking only daily supplies. With that supply exhausted rioting will begin, the Marines will land and another bloody chapter in Cuba's history will be written.

No official warfare will be authorized, but plans have already been made to fire upon the Marines as soon as it can be safely attempted.

The armed resistance to occupation will come from the younger members of the Directorio Estudiantil, thousands of young bravos infesting Havana, who for weeks have been committing assassinations or attempts at assassinations.

Wellesley Girls Hit as Detectives

Summons has been served on Lawrence Dischine, proprietor of a Wellesley Hills soft drink parlor, to appear in Dedham court Monday to answer a charge of filling prescriptions illegally as a result of evidence which Wellesley College girls assisted in gathering.

State health authorities sent in the stores and they allegedly secured medicines without a prescription. It is claimed a State representative was present when the purchases were made.

Threshing Machine Decapitates Woman

Lanesboro, Oct. 20—Mrs. Walter Bailey, 29, of Pittsfield, was killed as a threshing machine, which was being towed, broke loose and crashed into an auto in which she and her husband were riding. She was decapitated.

Bailey was cut on the head and arm, but was expected to recover. The threshing machine was being towed by Norman J. Chittenden of Williamstown.

4 TIRES BLOW OUT IN CHASE

A five-mile automobile chase, starting in Wayland, ended early today in Weston st., Waltham, when a stolen car driven by George Bernardo, 28, of Hudson, overturned at terrific speed and landed upright on four blowout tires.

Lieut. Tom Mitchell and State Trooper Stanley Skillings who had been in pursuit, dragged Bernardo from the car and rushed him to Waltham Hospital, where he was found to have a possible fracture of the skull and other serious injuries.

He was arrested on charges of auto larceny, drunken driving and refusing to stop for an officer. The policemen said he narrowly averted several collisions with other cars during the chase.

Husband Cuts Wife Off With One Dollar

New York, Oct. 20—Harry M. Craft, who died in Boston, Oct. 4, cut off his wife, Alice F. Craft, with only one dollar, it was revealed here with the filing of his will on an estate valued at approximately $10,000.

The will points out that Craft was seperated from his wife three years.

government will seek to enforce a national banking reform that will drive out the straw note.

Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the Federal National, was indicted for making false entries in connection with alleged straw notes totaling $97,000.

These notes were executed in the name of John V. O'Leary. Counsel for Mulloney argued that inasmuch as O'Leary existed records of the notes in his name, if he signed them, could not properly be termed false entries.

BOSTON IS CHOSEN

But Judge McLellan, making the first ruling of its character in the country concerning bank entries of straw loans, upheld the validity of the indictment, establishing the precedent for similar prosecution the country over.

Boston was chosen as the battleground for a test case because of the prevalence of the straw loan practice here. The Federal National is alleged to have made loans aggregating $1,700,000 to its officers and officers of its affiliates through the use of straw men.

Judge McLellan's ruling is likely to have an important effect upon the reopened federal investigation of the Boston Continental National bank crash. Loans for large amounts through the medium of straws have been found in the records of that bank and prosecution along the same lines as in the Federal National case may be expected.

RECORDS MISSING

Another development in the Federal National case is the disappearance of important records concerning the bank's investment subsidiary, the Federal National Investment Co., it was learned.

The missing records are believed mostly to concern realty investments in which the government is anxious to learn whether the use of straws was also employed.

Mulloney, it is understood, has not been able to help the government officials to locate the records.

One phase of the probe is said to have revealed that Jacob D. Greenberg, who handled many of the bank's realty deals, had borrowed as high as $5,000,000 from the bank, at one time holding $750,000 in checks of the bank's cashier.

Greenberg handled many apartment house properties for the Federal National. The investigators are said to have learned that at one time a janitor in a Cambridge apartment house to which the bank held title was listed as the owner of several apartment houses to which the bank held title.

ARREST LINKS GUSTIN GANG

visited the shop and looked over jewelry, saying they intended buying some for "a lady friend."

They did not buy, but a short time later the shop was robbed of more than $1500 in jewelry. Police said today Round has identified some of the jewelry seized by police in the Charlestown home of Florence and Evelyn Breen, dancers, when Tilley was arrested Wednesday night, as part of the Laconia shop loot.

SOUGHT CASH FOR BAIL

According to police, the spectacular South Station holdup, in which three men participated, marked a frantic last-minute attempt on the part of the Gustins to obtain money with which to "spring" their leader before he goes on trial.

He is charged with assault with intent to kill Special Officer Daniel McDonald, of police headquarters, who was beaten almost to death by Gustin gangsters.

From information obtained by police the Gustins were fearful that Steve, who succeeded to their leadership after the slaying of his brother Frank, would follow two other members of the mob to state prison.

They are Anthony Dembrowski and Thomas (Faggot) Dineen, convicted of assault on McDonald and given long terms in "The Big House."

SULLIVAN AT LARGE

The guard was decided after the slaying of Thomas "Red" Curran, member of the gang who paid with his life for squealing to the police. His bullet-riddled body was found in a Quincy quarry hole, together with a stolen automobile in which Curran had been taken for a ride and killed.

The dapper Steve Gustin, former pugilist, was arrested on Broadway, N. Y., last June, the night of the Sharkey-Carnera fight. He was picked up on information furnished police, and returned to this city. Bail was originally set at $100,000, but was later reduced. His case is on the list for trial.

Foley's arrest also resulted from information obtained by police, he being picked up on Washington st., by Sergt. Patrick J. Flaherty and officers of the Milk st. station.

ACCUSE TWO OF ROBBING WIDOW

Russell B. Clark, 48, of Commonwealth ave., Brighton, and Joseph Golden, 60, of Coolidge st., Brookline, today were arrested on charges involving theft of cash and stocks totaling more than $25,000 from a Back Bay widow, as well as for alleged violation of the Blue Sky laws.

Clark and Golden were jointly accused of the larceny of $600 on July 1, 1932; $100 on Sept. 2, 1932; 368 shares of stock valued at $8091.50 on Oct. 5, 1932; 78 shares valued at $989.88 on Oct. 7, 1932, and 40 shares worth $1475 on Oct. 11, 1932. Clark alone was charged with the larceny of 368 shares of stock valued at $15,250.26 on Nov. 22, 1932.

The pair was also jointly charged with violation of the Sales of Securities Act, and selling bonds not authorized by the public utilities commission. Clark was further accused of selling bonds without a license.

MEDFORD RALLY RACKET BARED

Medford's school committee is investigating a new political racket.

School halls are used for political rallies at the cost of lights, heat and janitor service, $10 to $25, according to the hall and police protection required.

Some to whom permits have been granted have charged each candidate for office $2 for the privilege of speaking at the rallies, it is alleged.

Thus when 15 or 20 candidates have spoken, a substantial profit has been made by the privilege holder.

1400 Geese Will Close Highway

Mansfield, Oct. 20—For three hours today the main highway here will be closed with a flock of 1400 geese given the right of way.

Slated for slaughter for Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, the geese will be forced to save carrying charges by walking from the railroad yards, three miles, to the Austin goosefarm. The birds come from Prince Edward Island.

South End Man Is Robbed on Common

Four men, who parked a light truck on Tremont st., held up and robbed Leon Glover, of St. Charles st., South End, of $23, on Boston Common, early today. Glover said three of the men held him, while the fourth went through his pockets. They fled in the truck.

Cambridge Woman Robbed of Handbag

Cambridge police were today searching for two youthful handbag thieves who robbed Miss Bridget Callahan, of Dana st., of $5 in money and keys, near her home. The youths wrested her handbag from her and fled.

NRA WE DO OUR PART
Therein lies an all-sufficient guarantee of fair and square dealing—a fact to which three generations of satisfied Osgood patrons will attest. Therein, also, lies a pledge of satisfaction in ownership. What we sell must be exactly as represented. It must give service in full measure for every dollar spent for we will not tolerate methods that would detract from an old and honorable name or lessen the prestige of our familiar slogan: "When in Doubt Buy of Osgood."

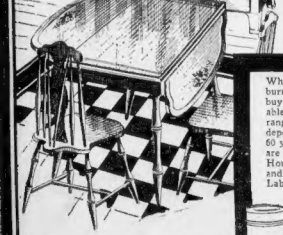
This example of fine craftsmanship shows the beauty of correct design pleasingly emphasized by superior tailoring and antique nail studding. The web construction and moss filling are warranted to be of the finest, which of course means real comfort. Wide selection of tapestry covers $89

These pieces after the manner of an early 18th Century original by Adam have the feeling of ruggedness and the charm of simplicity found in furniture of that period. The choice of walnut or mahogany veneering is entirely a matter of individual preference. Eight pieces: Table, buffet and six chairs $58
China cabinet $23.50

This 7-tube Atwater Kent radio in the Art Moderne gives finer reception than was ever possible before at this price. It also brings in police and amateur signals. $69.50

Smart English lounge style, in-built quality, comfortable proportions and fine tailoring are the appealing features of this chair in choice of covers. $22.50

Buy a Leonard and you buy a product efficient in every way — a fact to which thousands of enthusiastic Leonard owners will attest. Delivered and installed $112 up

To show how reasonably you can acquire furniture that will give your bedroom new dignity and character we illustrate this splendid group in rich mahogany veneer skillfully finished to accentuate the natural beauty of the graining. Three pieces: Dresser, bed and chest $78
Vanity $35.00


When buying an oil burner it always pays to buy one that is dependable . . . and Florence range oil burners are dependable. Backed by 50 years' experience, they are approved by Good Housekeeping Institute and the Underwriters' Laboratory. $29.50

The pieces comprising this group bear the unmistakable stamp of Osgood's distinguished quality and are pleasingly styled to achieve an effect that is restful and in good taste. Of interest also in point of value are their exquisite rendering in walnut veneer and clean finish. The price speaks for itself. Three full-size pieces: Dresser, bed and chest. $99.50
Vanity to match $35.00

Anyone seeking a breakfast set in simple refinement will like the sturdily constructed table and four chairs comprising this group in decorated Duco finish on maple . . . And the price is in keeping with small budget requirements $16.50

Granite Men Fight Boost in Taxes

Mayor Charles A. Ross, of Quincy, has assured the committee of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association, which has been protesting an alleged increase in the valuations of their property, that adjustments would be made if they were justifiable.

The mayor instructed that those wishing to complain should make individual protests to the tax collector and their cases would be viewed.

Six Persons Flee Beacon Hill Fire

Six persons were driven out when fire of undetermined origin broke out in the basement of the four-story brick apartment house at 20 Garden st., Beacon Hill, causing damage estimated at $2000. Firemen were forced to wear gas masks because of the smoke.

AIMEE TERMS REVIVAL HERE SUCCESS

Her second Boston revival completed and, in her own words, a religious and financial success, Mrs. Aimee Hutton will remain in Boston today, aiding Mrs. Jessie Costello in establishment of her commissary and conducting two services.

The services will be held at 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. at the Four Square Gospel Church. The noted evangelist plans to leave Boston tonight by a late train and will travel to Des Moines, Ia., to open another revival.

Mrs. Costello, the evangelist's most noted convert here, stated at the close of the revival she planned to become an ordained evangelist and follow in the steps of the famous Aimee.

She said she was giving up lucrative vaudeville offers to do this but failed to reveal the source of the offers. She plans to remain here until Christmas, launching the commissary and establishing it on a sound basis.

She expects to leave here for Los Angeles the day after Christmas. She will stay there for two years, studying evangelical methods and welfare work among the poor.

She said after this course of study was completed she would return here to conduct gospel services and revival meetings in all parts of New England.

Mrs. Hutton was overjoyed at the response to her revival and said she would be able to leave here an "honest woman" with all her bills paid. Her revival was brought to a dramatic close with the sermon "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." A crowd estimated at 10,000 thronged the Arena for the final service.

Tony Santello Is Freed on Assault

Worcester, Oct. 20—Tony Santello, former pugilist, was acquitted by a jury on a charge of assault. The government contended he and two other men assaulted Samuel Kaze, a tailor, in his shop last April 7.

One-Way Traffic for Dorchester Ave.

For eight weeks, starting Monday morning, inbound traffic on Dorchester ave, will be forced to detour because of repairs to be made on the Dorchester ave. bridge over Fort Point Channel. The traffic commission voted to make Fargo one way from the bridge to West First st. during that period.

BEARSE DEATH GUN IS TAKEN TO N. Y.

Barnstable, Oct. 20—State Detective Ernest S. Bradford, still probing the hijack slaying of Franklin Bearse in Hyannis 10 months ago, left for New York today to meet a missing witness in the mystery case, and took with him the 12-gauge shotgun with which Bearse is believed to have been killed.

This shotgun, declared by police to have been found in the home of Albert Elliott, on whose property, leased to rum runners, Bearse was slain, has a peculiar bulge in the barrel, but despite this distinctive mark police say they have been unable to trace its ownership.

Although the Barnstable county grand jury was dismissed on Wednesday after more than a week of questioning witnesses, the investigation is still continuing in an attempt to track down the slayers.

There has been no indication as to what conclusions the grand jury reached or if any indictments were returned.

Dist.-Atty. William C. Crossley said today he would like to hear from any witnesses anywhere who have information.

He has been devoting practically his entire attention to the case, night and day, checking and re-checking stories of witnesses.

State Detective John F Stokes and Asst. Atty-Gen. George B. Lourie, who entered the case only recently, are also following up new leads.

Ritchie Orders Lee to Hang Next Friday

Baltimore, Oct. 20—Governor Ritchie ordered Emil Lee, alias "Orphan Jones", twice convicted for an eastern shore murder of a white woman two years ago, be hanged Friday, October 27.

The governor signing the death warrant said:

"Lee has been convicted twice and so far as I have been able to determine, neither jury had the slightest doubt as to his guilt. However, a great deal of propaganda has been spread to the effect he is innocent, all of which I have discounted."

Gibson Quits as Vt. Congressman

St. Albans, Vt., Oct. 20—Cong. Ernest W. Gibson announced that he has forwarded his resignation to Gov. Stanley C. Wilson.

The resignation follows the recent announcement by Cong. Gibson that he will be a candidate to succeed the late U. S. Senator Porter H. Dale.

Find Missing Youth Victim of Suicide

Glens Falls, Oct. 20 (INS)—Missing since Jan. 1, the body of Robert Whipple, 18-year-old Glens Falls academy student, was found by a hunter today, in a coupe, parked in the brush in the town of Moreau.

Bluenose Trails Thebaud's Wake in Great Lakes

Lunenburg, N. S., Oct. 20—Blue nose, queen of North Atlantic fishing schooners, followed in Gertrude L. Thebaud's wake all the way from Chicago to Windsor, Ont.

Fishermen here smiled in disbelief when they heard the news until Capt Ben Pine explained how his Gloucester schooner led the Atlantic Queen all the way through Lake Michigan and Lake Huron.

Bluenose and Thebaud, after their stay at the world fair, were leaving Chicago together. There wasn't enough wind for Capt Angus Walters, so he put a line on the auxiliary-equipped Thebaud and towed behind Bluenose a American rival.

Skipper Pine told the story here as his vessel lay in harbor on her way home from the fair. He called here to pay his respects to Bluenose a home port.

Signal Maintainer Dies in B. & M. Yard

A heart attack was said today to have caused the death of Oliver Mitchell, 58, of Hall ave., West Somerville, signal maintainer for the B. & M. railroad. Mitchell collapsed in a maintenance car in the yards, outside North station. He had been ill for several weeks and had just returned to work Wednesday.

Don't let jangled nerves make childhood unhappy

When we suffer from jangled nerves we don't realize how harshly we speak.

We wonder why we lose the love and respect of those who are close to us.

That's the real danger of jangled nerves . . . the victim so seldom knows. And the more high-strung and alive you are, the greater the danger.

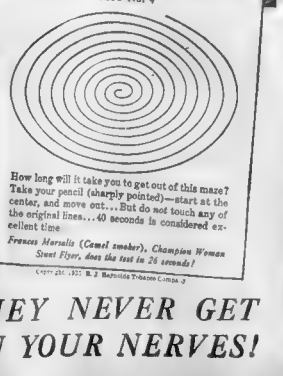
If things don't seem to be going so well—if money is on your mind—if you worry—then look out.

Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

How are YOUR nerves? TEST No. 4



How long will it take you to get out of this maze? Take your pencil (sharply pointed)—start at the center, and move out... But do not touch any of the original lines... 40 seconds is considered excellent time

Very Little in Sciatica

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

If you ever had sciatica you will agree with me it is a painful affliction and one to be dreaded. We hate all pain, but this seems to be particularly enomo

Recently a man talked with me about his sciatica. In his eagerness for a quick cure he had reported to all the well known remedies but had obtained little relief. His pain was intense and he was desperate for a cure.

Dr. Copeland

The victim of sciatica must realize that this ailment may be due to one of many things. In order to obtain a cure it is necessary first to undergo a complete physical examinm The man I mentioned had failed to do this, instead he had resorted immediately to patent medicines, home remedies and "cures" recommended by everyone but a doctor who had found the real cause.

Infected teeth, gums, nasal sinuses, tonsils, gall bladder, or appendix may be the seat of the disturbance. When the diseased organ is removed or properly treated, the inflammation of the sciatic nerve subsides. Occasionally sciatica can be traced to a constitutional disorder, such as diabetes or tuberculosis.

Rare Bridge Situation Explained

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Mr. Newman Lee Fitzhenry of Stimson Beach, Cal., remarks that the Culbertson system of bidding seems to cope with any combination of holdings that it is possible to deal at the bridge table.

In support of this contention he submits the hand below and remarks that it contains a bid which he doubts has often been used under the same circumstances.

South, dealer.

	North
	Mr. Fitzhenry ♠A103 ♡K6 ◇KJ43 ♣954
Mrs. Goodsell ♠32 ♡Q13 ◇A8 ♣KQ1087 32		Mr. Goodsell ♠875 ♡972 ◇Q1095 ♣AJ6
	South ♠KQ1964 ♡10854 ◇762 ♣3

Mr. Fitzhenry

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1♣ (1)	Double (2)	Redouble (3)
4♠ (4)	4♡ (5)	Double (6)	Pass
4♠ (7)	Pass	Pass	Pass

I give Mr. Fitzhenry's notes on the bidding:

"(1) A sound vulnerable opening in second position.

"(2) Even when a passing partner and a vulnerable opening, this takeout double is warranted.

"(3) A slight overbid, but considering the situation to date, and it being, no doubt, his last chance to "talk," the bid is justified on the theory that it may slow up the opponents and avert, as he suspects, a game contract.

"(4) Just consider the following combination of circumstances—This player has passed as Dealer; vulnerable opponents have opened the bidding; they opened the bidding; they have redoubled the Takeout Double of a vulnerable opponent; and yet this player wants a game contract for his side—in something How can he secure it without fail in his own spade suit or his partner's theoretical heart suit? When and where was this Forcing bid ever used under such a combination of circumstances.

"(5) Alert Mrs. Goodsell is bid has put my wife in a tough spot. My Forcing bid is still a complete mystery to everyone; she knows I have something good in addition to a probable void in clubs—but what? She wants to encourage me by indicating that her first Double was more than justified. In honor strength so she makes a safe bid, leaving it to my judgment as to whether it shall stand at penalty or game.

"(7) From my distribution it does not look as though the penalty can be more than one trick.

TODAY'S QUESTION

I bid one notrump, Second Hand doubled, and my partner and Fourth Hand both passed. I redoubled. My partner had a very weak hand and said he could not possibly bid. Was he right?

Answer: Your partner was forced to bid, and the weaker his hand the greater the obligation on him to take you out of the notrump redoubled. Your Redouble in that position is for a Takeout and means that you are not willing to play the hand at notrump.

U. S. Will Hear Denny Music From Here

By N. P. T.

Being among those present at the premiere festivities during which dance orchestra prince Jack Denny took his Boston bow and also did much broadcasting, has been sufficient to make quite clear to me and why this good looking sorrel topped young champion of rhythm expression is so popular. He held forth most effectively in his new bright spot—meaning Salle Moderne at the Hotel Statler. Needless to say, wireless transmitting facilities for WEEI perpetrated to waft his music making all over New England.

* * *

Ushered in on us direct from the Waldorf Astoria hostelry in New York is automatically an adequate Denny bill of essentials, aside from the nationwide acclaim he has justifiable Denny hereabouts for the next few weeks. Then there's the lovely Jeannie Lang, [illegible] not to be gazed upon without the recognition her pulchritude, personality and vocal vivacity commands. Jeannie just makes the Denny orchestral doings that much more delightful when she sings. Especially the "Big Bad Wolf" bit. Paul Small deservedly comes in for more than usually pardon pon) notice as a tenor soloing asset—even if he does have an inconsistent calling card imprint for such a husky chap.

FIERY FIGURES

An impression of the German Chancellor is being relayed by radio during the "March of Time" program tonight (WNAC) at 8:30. Herr Hitler will have air impersonation by Webster Van Voorhis. Wednesday night last marked the windup of Harry Richman and Milton Berle with the well known Waring's Pennsylvanians half hour. MARY, WHY DON'T YOU TRY 2 BAYER ASPIRIN TABLETS. THEY'LL GET RID OF YOUR NEURALGIA IN A FEW MINUTES
2. 20 MINUTES LATER —
YES, ISN'T IT WONDERFUL!

For Quick Relief Say BAYER Aspirin When You Buy

Here is quicker relief from pain—the fastest safe relief, it is said, ever known. This is due to a new method of discovery by which BAYER Aspirin starts "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass here tells the story. A Bayer tablet starts to disintegrate or dissolve—go to work—almost instantly. This means quick relief from pain—fewer lost hours from headache, neuritis, rheumatism. And safe relief. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

When you buy, see that you get the genuine Bayer Aspirin. The best way is never to ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But if you want Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always to say "BAYER Aspirin."

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST
Drop a Bayer Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate.
What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

'Also Ran' Doped for Gamblers

Federal agents, after waging a secret, nation-wide campaign against the drugging of race horses, have revealed their startling findings to Frank G. Menke, noted sports writer. He has compiled these disclosures into a series of stories being published in the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Below is the ninth of this series.

The narcotic agents have disclosed that widespread "doping" of thoroughbreds is practiced openly at the country's leading tracks to give the runners super-speed and stamina and to permit the "insiders" of a crooked gambling ring to clean up in the parimutuels. Follow this series and learn to what extent the true lovers of horseflesh are being duped

By FRANK G. MENKE

(Copyright, 1933, by King Features Syndicate)

New York, Oct. 20 — After Ralph Oyler led the Federal narcotic raiding squad at Arlington Park, Chicago, agents for the government were sent to other race meetings to gather new data relating to the possession and the use of cocaine, heroin and morphine at those places, which investigations are still being conducted.

Oyler, with the sanction of Harry Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics in Washington, consented to my accompanying him while he visited a track, conferred with the operatives, studied their day-by-day reports, and advised as to the next moves.

The agents, posing as former horsemen in quest of equine bargains, practically had the run of all the barns. Little escaped their attention because, as they put it, "only the blind would have been unable to see the 'doctoring.'"

And all of this was after the Arlington raid, proving that, with the first scare over, the horsemen who dope their animals were back at it again.

"EXPLODED" AFTERWARD

The older of the two agents picked up a newspaper, showing the race entries for that day, indicated the name of a horse, and said to Oyler

"They 'doctored' this one two days ago. He finished far back.' Form charts said something about 'dull race.' The way I figure it is thus: the stuff didn't work on time—it exploded after the race. I heard last evening that they were going to 'hit' (meaning dope) him again today. They boast they won't miss this time. You might watch that horse as he parades to the post. Maybe you can tell if they 'hit' him. I can't get away from the barns to advise you, but if there is some brisk betting on that runner, you can draw your own conclusions."

The horse was around 8 to 1 in the approximate opening odds. This was cut to 5 to 1 on the next reading and then 3¾ to 1. The close was about 11 to 5. This proved heavy wagering. No doubt the trainer and the stable hand had made their individual plunge and the likelihood was that a "big shot" gambler had been "tipped" and was in to make for a "clean up."

Race track gamblers ever are seeking "live information." If a trainer will advise when he has a horse "prettied up" for a winning race, they will respond by making a wager for him. Usually they bet $100 to $250 for the owner or trainer. If the horse triumphs, the trainer or owner gets the winnings. If it loses, the trainer or owner gets a terrific verbal lacing and sometimes a physical one. Sure thing" gamblers dislike 'shooting the works" on faulty information.

When the horses came out of the paddock that afternoon, Oyler, an assistant and myself put field glasses on the one named by the agent to study him as closely as possible. He was sweating profusely; his skin seemed to be twitching. He was swishing his tail and, most obvious of all, he was snapping his head up and down, then from one side to the other with spasmodic jerks, as if trying to shake himself loose from pain, or some strange sensation.

"IMPROVED RACE"

"These are symptoms of cocaine influence," pointed out Oyler. "Of course, actions like that are not infallible indications because some horses naturally are nervous and do a lot of fretting. But when a horse looks like this one, and acts like this one, and you know a big betting plunge has been made, you can just about decide he has been 'doctored.'

"I think," added Oyler dryly, "that the form charts tomorrow will say something about this horse running 'a greatly improved race,' and maybe the turf writers will have something to say about another 'flip-flop.' Let's look at the charts dealing with his most recent races."

Based upon three previous races shown in the chart, all of which described the animal as "outrun," the horse had no possible chance to win on that particular afternoon. He had been beaten when the winner's time was 1 minute 13 4-5 seconds for six furlongs (three quarters of a mile). He lost when another winner's time was 1:14 and he was whipped by almost 30 lengths when a horse ran the distance in 1:13 1-5. Then came a discovery!

Track conditions for all four races had been the same; the weight carried by the horse was approximately equal; the jockey was the same on each occasion. Yet the horse which had won in 1 11 4-5 about three weeks earlier had been thoroughly beaten in 1 13 4-5, 1.14 and 1 13 3-5.

A horse which runs six furlongs in 1 12 is travelling at the rate of 52 4-5 feet per second. Therefore, this animal which had won in 1:11 4-5, ran that day at the rate of about 53 feet per second, but averaged perhaps less than 50 feet on his three successive losing afternoons.

DOPE IS THE ANSWER

"Dope perhaps is your answer," said Oyler. "They probably had him loaded and the drug exploded at the proper time on the day he ran in 1:11 4-5. The other three days were afternoons when they let him run without dope, or when the cocaine didn't 'hit' him at the right time. So he turned in one of those 'dull performances.'"

The horse was fractious at the barrier. His wild actions held up the start. Eventually they were away. This particular animal wasn't quite prepared for the rise of the barrier and broke in a tangle, but the jockey quickly untangled him, gained clear passage, the animal ran as if some fiend with a thousand lashes were in pursuit, caught the leaders one by one, went to the front with a terrific burst of speed and won in 1:12—running like a wild horse at the end.

That night the agents reported to Oyler:

"They 'hit' that horse twice; once about an hour before the race and later about 10 minutes before they took him to the paddock."

AVOID THE DANGER OF CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Overcomes This Condition Safely and Pleasantly

The first signs of constipation may be headaches, tired feelings, sallow complexions, sleeplessness, loss of appetite. If neglected, constipation may seriously impair health.

Today, you can banish constipation by simply eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action similar to leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, and gently clears out the intestinal wastes.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of common constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FORGRAVE, DRY HEAD, DIVORCED

William M Forgrave, former superintendent of the Massachusetts branch of the Anti-Saloon League was divorced today at Reno, Nev by Anna Heinrich Forgrave of Everett.

The former militant crusader for prohibition was charged with cruelty by the woman he married in New York city three years ago.

In the same court at Reno Forgrave obtained a divorce in 1929 on the ground of incompatibility

Word came from the Nevada divorce capital less than two days ago that his second wife had filed suit, and the decree was not expected so soon.

Forgrave is now a broker in Boston and lives in Cambridge, but until he separated from his wife he was living on Buckman st., Everett. There are no children. The first Mrs. Forgrave has custody of a daughter eight years old, by that marriage.

While head of the Anti-Saloon League, Forgrave brought about several investigations, including the probe of a "wet invasion" at the State House as the Legislature prorogued in 1 927. A legislative committee exonerated the Legislature.

NRA Replaces XY in Algebra Class

NRA has entered the school curriculum at Melrose High via the higher mathematics classes. Instead of using the familiar X and Y and A and B, etc., pupils now mark their angles and triangles N or K or A. And when additional letters are required, they add P, R, Q.

THIRD WEDDING FOR COUPLE

Worcester, Oct 20 For the third time, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Hall have been married.

Eighteen months after their first marriage, Mrs. Hall instituted divorce proceedings, but the couple were reunited and the suit was never tried. On February 6, 1929, Mrs. Hall again brought suit and was granted a decree on grounds of cruelty, intoxication and non-support.

They married again, however, in June, 1931. The marriage lasted four months and Mrs. Hall again sued for and won a divorce. Friends have received word they were remarried in New York by a deputy city clerk

BROKERS YIELD TO SENATE

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—Differences between Senate investigators and the New York Stock Exchange over submission of evidence relating to pool and other market operations today were apparently erased.

Edward A. Pierce, a member of the Exchange subpoenaed by the committee along with other brokers, said the Exchange was willing to cooperate is permitted "reasonable latitude" in submitting the information.

Previous negotiations to reach a compromise between Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, and Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel had collapsed and the investigators had threatened to subpoena all 1375 members of the exchange.

Members of the committee indicated they would be satisfied with results that were "reasonably accurate."

"We are willing to cooperate, but exact answers would cost $50,000 and take several months," the broker said.

Quizzed by Senator Couzens, Mr. Pierce said the information would be within less than 10 per cent of complete accuracy even if "reasonable latitude" was allowed.

'Roosevelt a Dictator Like Me,' Says Il Duce

New York, Oct. 20 (AP) Politically, President Roosevelt and Premier Mussolini are, in the opinion of Il Duce, brothers under the skin, Hilbert T. Hodges declared today.

Hodges, chairman of the board of the Advertising Federation of America, addressed the Advertising Club of New York, reporting on a recent conversation he had with Premier Mussolini in Italy.

Mussolini

Pres. Roosevelt

"This Premier asked about our American parliaments," said Hodges, "and I told him they had abdicated in favor of Mr. Roosevelt. I told him they apparently were glad to pass this responsibility over to the President.

"Well" replied Premier Mussolini, "Doesn't that make Mr. Roosevelt a dictator?"

"I told him that it looked a little that way to me and he appeared to think so, too."

STRIKE TO END IN SPRINGFIELD

Washington, Oct. 20 (INS)—The National Labor board expects to settle the strike at the Westinghouse plant in East Springfield Mass. today, Sen. Wagner, chairman of the board, announced at NRA headquarters

Wagner said he called back the representatives of the workers and officials of the company for further conference today and that only one point remained to be settled

John Gateles, labor adviser of the Electrical Workers' Union, at the hearing yesterday charged the company was not paying the wages specified under the code. He said only about 1000 of the 3000 employed in the East Springfield plant were receiving these rates of pay.

Gateles also charged that company officials had refused to recognize the union. Gateles asked for a 33 1-3 per cent increase in pay, claiming that only by such an increase could the old wage scales be maintained with working hours reduced under the code from 54 to 36 per week.

J. S. Tuttle, vice-president and general manager of the company, stated that two wage increases, amounting to 11 per cent, had been put into effect since the code went into operation.

Buying Now Wise and Patriotic

By FAITH BALDWIN
Novelist, Who Has a Serial Running in Cosmopolitan Magazine

New York, Oct. 20—I've been buying more since the NRA program has been under way for two reasons. It is a gesture of patriotism and it is common sense.

To buy now is to contribute directly to the national fund that is being built up to spur revival. The dawn of the revival will not be here until we solve our tremendous unemployment problem—one of the major objectives of the President's public works program and the NRA campaign.

The Will-to-Buy is the best corrective of the era of hesitancy from which we must emerge as a people before we can enjoy the full advantages of the New Deal.

Louis Lipsky Tells Jews of Palestine

Palestine has become a practical project in solving the Jewish problem, guests at the first dinner meeting of the Temple Mishkan Tefila Brotherhood, Seaver st. and Elm Hill ave., were told last night. The speaker was Louis Lipsky of New York, former president of the Zionist Organization of America, and American representative to the World Jewish Agency.

SENATORS URGE BIG PAY CUTS

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—Further legislation to slash salaries of big business executives was advocated by a group of senators today as the Federal Trade Commission awaited responses to its request for salary data from 2000 corporations.

Motivated by disclosures in the Senate Wall Street inquiry that as high as half a million dollars have gone to one financier in salaries and bonuses for one year during the depression, these Senators now in Washington are almost a unit for doing something to keep salaries down.

Some feel Congress can regulate the pay of heads of all business—public and private. Most, however, agree restrictions could be applied only indirectly and then only to those corporations doing business with the government.

Senator Couzens (R.-Mich.) one of the wealthiest senators and a member of the stock market investigating committee, said he believed continuous publication of salaries would tend to keep them at a lower level.

Fish and Bottles Tossed in Crash

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 20—A truck loaded with live trout, thousands of them, collided with one carrying empty beer bottles yesterday. Fish and bottles were strewn over the street in profusion.

KIDNAP MOTHER SOBS HER WOE

the Nickersons in a cardboard box. How could a person hold a baby in a cardboard box and drive a car?" she opened.

"The baby was in a carton that was plenty large enough to hold her, yet small enough to fit on the seat beside me. It was well padded and lined so the baby would not get many bumps.

"The Nickersons were one of several couples who put an ad in the paper for babies to board. I had certain misgivings about boarding my baby in East Boston—I don't know why, but just because I never liked the section. The Nickersons had an American name, however, and I decided to see them first.

"All the time they had the baby they had an address through which they could reach me. They are wrong when they said they couldn't find me.

"They said I consented to give them the baby. I never consented. I never in my life consented. I never will consent."

At that point the mother's high-pitched voice broke and she burst into tears again.

"They asked her many times if they could adopt her," she continued. "I said 'No!' and I will always say 'No!'

TAUGHT HER NAME

"It took me two years to decide to come back to Boston from New Hampshire. But, O, how I wanted to get my baby back!

"I saw the baby the latter part of November and nothing was said by the Nickersons then about adopting her. They already had taught her to call herself 'Jeanne Marie Nickersen' and, over my protest, they referred to her as Jeanne instead of the name I wished to have her called.

"About a month later they filed petition for adoption. It was marked 'Parents Whereabouts Unknown,' when they knew all the time how they could reach me. The state located me with little difficulty after the petition was filed.

"Then I took steps to have a temporary guardianship decree remated. That was in January, a few weeks after the decree had been granted, I went to East Boston and took the baby home without any trouble.

FEARED LOSS OF BOND

"I called Mrs. Nickerson later—I guess it was to keep a promise that I would let her know how she was doing—and she sounded as though she had been crying. She asked me to let her have the baby back until the temporary decree was removed. She explained that her husband had posted a bond and was afraid of losing it for giving the child to me.

"For that reason I took the baby back, but with the understanding that it was to be only until the temporary guardianship was removed.

"When I got the removal my oldest daughter and I walked from Boston to East Boston on a cold night be fourth of March. When we got to the Nickerson home at 8 o'clock they were not in and my daughter and I waited in a cold vestibule until they arrived at 11—with my tired, little girl. I showed them the paper and took my girl.

"On the way home she was delighted because she was going to sleep with 'Bobby,' that's a nickname for the other daughter.

"They said they would not push the adoption case but would withdraw it.

"Later they started the adoption talk again and I again refused to give up my child. They threatened then to 'get some satisfaction' and I hope they are out of all this mess."

Mrs Patrone explained her reason for wanting the girl now was a desire to see her educated in a way of which she approved. It was at that point she recalled her school teaching days and said she wanted her daughter to get as good an education.

"In one more year she will be going to school. I want to see to her teaching. Mrs. Nickerson admitted her own son never did his home work last year. Is she the proper one to have my child educated.

"I will not give her up. I will fight every move—" and the story of the kidnap mother ended in sobs.

21 TO BE AGE LIMIT IN NEW LIQUOR SALE LAW

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

Out at the American Library Association meeting in Chicago a gentleman is seeking to boost the library and the printed page at the expense of the teacher and the spoken word. This attack on the lecture system in schools and colleges has become a kind of stock in trade with a certain type of educator, and many people who do not know what they are talking about have taken it up without examination and are dutifully repeating their new lesson. He is reported to have spoken thus:

"The lecture is an outworn appendage of mediaeval education, when books were few. Today there is no excuse for listening to a lecturer deliver excerpts from printed material available in the library."

This indictment falls under two heads, which I shall take up in turn. The first is that the lecture arose simply because books were few, if should put it the other way about. Oral teaching and preaching was the first form of education. The wise man who handed on the old traditions and formulated new truths taught by word of mouth. The written record, when it came, was simply a convenient substitute for memory. The book was not the source of facts and knowledge; it was the summary. It is true that in the mediaeval lecture room there was probably but one copy of the book. From it the teacher read aloud and expounded. But the important thing was not the text, but the teacher's commentary.

So it is today. Any teacher, whether in the schools or in college, knows what a large proportion of students, even adults, are incapable of handling a printed book alone. The commentary on the text is as necessary as in the days of Peter Lombard and Peter Abelard. Nothing can ever take the place of the teacher or lecturer for selecting, arranging, clarifying, commenting, making a map of the rough country, laying out the paths, showing the direction and giving a birds eye view of the terrain. Incidentally, the lecture is by far the most economical and efficient way of furnishing the necessary background to detailed examination of books. The one cannot function successfully without the other.

The other statement is amusing. "Today there is no excuse for a lecturer to deliver excerpts from printed material available in a library." The theory is that the lecturer merely repeats the book. But the good lecturer is, often as not, writing the book! The book is not the source of his thinking aloud; it is the result. That is why no book can take the place of the original teacher or lecturer. The book means an end-point reached, a conclusion; it is static, rigid. The lecture is the beginning of thinking and exploration. It is incomplete, flexible, dynamic.

* * *

Do you suppose that any readers ever get much out of the printed books of William Graham Sumner, the Yale economist, or Irving Babbitt, the Harvard humanist, as their own students did from the original lectures, which later went into the books. They were geniuses, of course. But not even the mediocre lecturer deals with printed material without contributing something, without suffusing it with his own creative personality, in proportion to his powers. No history of civilization is complete without a record of the long line of great teachers whose ideas and personalities have helped change the course of history.

It is becoming fashionable to say that all a university needs is a library. The teaching staff is optional. This, of course, is malicious nonsense. I would much rather put my money on a university with the teachers, whether it had the library or not. And the testimony of a thousand years would back me up. The public that educates itself at libraries educates itself in casual haphazard, accidental and unorganized fashion, compared with the public that has at least learned the possibilities of education under competent teachers.

* * *

This thoughtless ballyhoo for the libraries as a substitute for education would not mean anything, were it not a concept that is being deliberately inculcated in our educational world. What means the teachers' college insistence on pedagogy, the technical methods of teaching, if not that our school machines are trying to subordinate personality to mechanics? True, many of our candidates for public school teaching are of so poor a quality that it must be mechanics or nothing.

Cultural background in a teacher must take second place to pedagogical theory. Personality and originality must take second place to methods and mechanics. The transition from the teachers' college-trained teacher of the present to the talking film and the canned radio lesson is not a very long step. Some day somebody will invent a robot that will fulfill perfectly all the requirements of the scientific pedagogues. By that time the pupil will probably be unable to read at all, so the libraries will lose out, also. But by that time nothing will matter!

HULTMAN URGES LIFE JOBS FOR POLICE HEADS

Commissioner Wants Stealing of Autos Made a Felony.

Life jobs for police heads, or during good behavior, was advocated at the State House by Police Comm. Eugene C. Hultman of Boston, whose removal was sought only a short time ago.

The suggestion was made at a conference of 78 police department heads called by Atty.-Gen. Warner to discuss new methods of fighting crime.

Hultman also declared that stealing autos should be made a felony instead of the joke which it now is.

"I don't recall a serious crime in Boston since I have been commissioner," he said, "that didn't involve a stolen car.

SAFEGUARD PUBLIC

"The penalty for stealing an auto under the present law, makes the use of an auto by other than the properly authorized person a slight offense. If the use of automobiles, without proper authority, were a felony, it would act as a deterrent and it would safeguard the public using the highways, as well as assist in the apprehension of criminals."

Referring to police heads, Hultman said they should be beyond political interference and removable only by a majority of the Supreme Judicial Court on a bill of petition. He said he is convinced after a study that the police are part of the judiciary.

WARNER PLANS COUNCIL

A short time ago as a result of Hultman's action in closing the City Point and Joy st. police stations, City Councillor William G. Lynch asked Gov. Ely to remove him from office.

At the conference Atty Gen. Warner proposed a grand police council consisting of heads of all local police departments, and the creation of an advisory commission on police affairs to act as an administrative body in carrying out the purposes of the chiefs.

E. Frederick Singer of Toronto, member of Parliament and a King's counselor, explained the organization of the police in Canada, without political domination or interference.

Public Safety Commissioner Daniel Needham said whole-hearted cooperation between local and state police is essential.

59 NURSES GET DIPLOMAS

Fifty-nine young women today hold diplomas from the Training School for Attendant Nurses, conducted by the Household Nursing Assn. Graduation exercises were held at Copley Methodist Church. Miss Elizabeth Ross, of West Newton, president of the State Nurses' Association, was the speaker. Diplomas were presented by Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, 3d, of Brookline.

Carney to Address Catholic Union Meet

A program combining both instructive and entertaining features has been arranged for the Members Night, to be held at the Catholic Union of Boston next Wednesday evening. Guests and speakers of the evening will be Joseph P. Carney, Collector of Internal Revenue, and Henry Woelber, nationally known bandsman.

This will be one of the first social engagements Mr. Carney has accepted since receiving this appointment.

Baroness Changes Her Mind

BARONESS VON BLOMBERG , MARY SULLIVAN

Baroness Adelheid, 70, who has a mind of her own and a woman's right to change it, has again decided to adopt William Theobald Frary. The young man has already been received by society's open arms and now he'll do his barnetting authentically. The baroness is shown with a friend, Miss Mary D. Sullivan, at the courthouse, where she told of her replanned adoption after winning a clash with her sister, the Princess Eva, over a conservator. (Boston American Photo.)

Sues Doctor Who Put Her in Psychopatic Ward

Suit for $50,000 against Dr. Lewis D. Adams of the back Bay was filed today in Middlesex Superior court by Mrs. Helen M. Hough of Arlington, who claims she was "railroaded" to the Psychopathic Hospital and forced to undergo a nerve-wracking experience for six days.

Mrs. Hough asserts she was carried forcibly to the hospital and held there for the sole reason that her mother wished to break up her friendship with Wilbert McConnell of Arlington, a married man, now serving 18 months on a bad check charge.

Besides seeking damages for her own alleged illegal commitment, Mrs. Hough plans to wage a battle to free McConnell from jail on the ground that he is innocent.

Mrs. Hough, who is represented by Atty. Max Reiser of 1 Beacon st., is the daughter of the wealthy Mr. and Mrs Charles H. Wilson of Crow Point, Hingham.

PLANS DIVORCE SUIT

Her husband, from whom she is estranged, is Marshall I. Hough, advertising executive and a World War veteran in the Royal Welsh Flying Corps.

Mrs. Hough revealed that at one time she asked Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill to intercede with her mother. Bishop Sherrill married Mr. and Mrs. Hough at Trinity church in 1928.

She revealed her version of her friendship with McConnell confessed she no longer loved her husband and said she planned to ask for a divorce.

She claims that Dr. Adams, who is a resident of Arlington, signed the commitment papers without full knowledge that Mrs. Hough was sound in mind and body.

"COULD GO CRAZY"

She asserts Dr. Adams had not seen her for eight months prior to the commitment last July, when, she declares, she was forcibly seized by two Arlington policemen and thrown into her mother's car for the trip to the hospital in Roxbury.

"Perfectly sane persons can go insane at the Psychopathic Hospital, seeing and hearing weird women screaming and yelling all night long," said Mrs. Hough. "It was a fearful experience.

"I have known Mr. McConnell since August, 1932, when my husband and I met him and his wife and their four children at Falmouth.

"In November, my parents and husband said I was being overfriendly with Mr. McConnell and that he was going after me because he thought I had money.

"I didn't want to break my friendship with Mr. McConnell. My feelings toward my husband had changed almost at once after my marriage.

"My family railed Mr. McConnell out to Hingham and my husband struck him. My mother kicked him when he was on the floor and fractured two ribs. They threw him out of the house.

TRAILED BY DETECTIVES

"That was Nov. 17. The next day Dr. Adams came out to give me a tonic. My nerves were all upset over the incident.

"On Dec. 3 I left my husband and put the furniture in storage. I went to New York and he had detectives following me.

"I came back to Boston and went to Bishop Sherrill and asked him to write to my mother and beg her to leave me alone. But she didn't let up.

"In April I went back home and lived with my mother for three weeks. Then I took a room in Arlington Heights.

"On that awful day in July, the 5th, I came out of the house and walked down the street. My Mother's car, with my brother at the wheel, was outside.

"Two Arlington police officers, Flynn and Scanlon, in plain clothes, were in the car. I walked by, ignoring them. I crossed the street.

SILVER SHIRTS OUT OPENLY FOR HITLER

William Dudley Pelley's organization is definitely and incontrovertibly anti-Jewish and pro-Nazi. The Silver Shirt high command, now talking about a convention while lookin,, for $10 members in the former hotbed of Kianism, has proudly boasted that it is "now snowballing to success exactly as Hitler snowballed in Germany."

That statement is taken from an announcement handed to reporters in Oklahoma City today. The handout further says:

"On Jan. 31, 1933—the day that Hitler came into power in Germany—Pelley came out from under cover with his Silver Shirt national organization. His organization is now snow-balling exactly as Hitler's snow-balled Germany when the German people were at last persuaded of the truth.

"Heads of certain Jewish organizations in America—masquerading as high-principled, benevolent institutions—have already threatened him with death, thus proving the American tie-up between Judaism and the Communistic Satanism that Pelley's Silver Shirts are battling.

"The Jew, Walter Winchell, has already gone out of his way in the controlled and intimidated press of America to disparage and vilify him.

"Jews everywhere, unable to answer his arguments, are resorting to charge him with libel fearing the further authenticated disclosures he could make, bound and annoy and censor and suppress him, his workers and his work."

Much emphasis was again put on the words Protestant and Christian in today's Silver Shirt proclamations, leading to the belief in many circles that denials of anti-Hitlerism and anti-Semitism that Catholics might join the organization were just defensive gestures against the storm of indignation that is breaking over the new Asian

Jazzing Up Higher Education

You can hire an orchestra at the Harvard employment bureau. You can get most any type of act, even a crew who put on a puppeteer act. Harvard students are working their way through college in this manner. Last winter this bureau offered high trained bands of snow shovelers—this year it's entertainment. The quintet, left to right, are, front, Chester Jones, Stanley Linoh; rear, Kayler Jankins, Pick Carleton and Ned Marshall. (Boston American Photos.)

FRARY MAY YET BE BARON

Exercising a woman's privilege, Baroness Adelheid von Blomberg has again changed her mind and proposes to go through with her plan to adopt William Theobald Frary, East Lynn "Cinderella Man."

Although she told Judge Dolan in Suffolk Probate Court that she had abandoned the plan, the Baroness changed her mind after visiting the home of Frary's parents.

She said she had given up the project to adopt Frary and make him a baron originally because of objections by her sister, Baroness Eva. However she interpreted the decision of Judge Dolan to appoint a conservator for her, as giving her permission to do what she wishes.

Freshmen at B. C. to Have Retreat

The annual retreat for the upper classmen of Boston College is concluded and the retreat for the freshman class begins next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The retreat will be in charge of the Rev. John J. Lyons, S. J., rector of Shadowbrook, the Jesuit novitiate at West Stockbridge.

Peppy Crimson Jazz Tunes Just Waiting for a Call

All tuned up and ready to go, Harvard students who have turned professional entertainers, await only calls for their services to prove to the public how skillful they are. Last year Harvard featured professional snow-shovelers and window washers as aspirants to needed cash registered with the Harvard University Employment Bureau at University Hall.

This year, however, the students have risen to a higher plane and have formed a Student Entertainment Bureau, prepared to furnish, at the drop of a hat or a contract, or even a word, a skilled student magician, an orchestra — straight or comic — a ventriloquist, harmonica players, tap dancers, a marionnette show, and even le tureurs.

Or, if you wish an entire evening of entertainment you can have the whole kit and caboodle and the students will arrange your evening of fun.

All the students registered as entertainers have been tried out passed upon by a critical board, and are available for all types of programs, even the more serious ones.

The Entertainment Service in University Hall and can be reached by calling the Harvard number, University 7600—and the students promise to surprise you with their talent, and the wealth of it.

DENTISTS NAME JOHNSON HEAD

WELFARE BOOST STIRS STORM

Increase in welfare expenditures in Brookline has raised a storm of protest that will be formulated into a campaign by the recently formed Brookline Taxpayers' Association it was learned today.

The taxpayers group will hold its first meet next Wednesday evening in the Public Library Hall. Officers are to be elected and committee reports heard.

The city's expenditure of $276,406 for welfare in the first nine months of this year, compared with $261,066 all of last year, will be the first subject taken up, it was said.

MAJORITY HITS LETTING BOYS HAVE RUM

Sawyer Sees Return of Prohibition if the Bars Are Down

The legislative commission's final report on hard liquor control will probably ban sales to all persons under 21 years of age, it was learned today, although certain members of the committee favor an 18-year age limit.

The commission believes the 18-year recommendation might prove a "last straw" on the backs of the prohibition camels and retard legislative action on the liberal plan which now appears certain to pass.

Serving liquor in the Harvard houses and in other colleges will not be a possibility under the plan.

The strong sentiment manifested in the commission in favor of selling liquor by the drink in taverns, hotels, restaurants, clubs, trains and steamships, was taken as an indication of easy passage of the measure through a special legislative session early in November.

A surprise developed in the announcement that a dissenting report will be filed by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, an ardent opponent of prohibition.

He will recommend acceptance of the so-called Warren report, which would restrict sales of liquors to bottled goods, not to be drunk on the premises, with government stores set up to handle sales.

The clergymen House member predicted that if the recommendations of the majority of the committee are adopted there will be state prohibition in five years.

He directed his attack on the latter idea, which he said was a return to the old "tipping shop" of early days, or the gin mills of 300 years ago in England.

Sen. Harry B. Putnam of Westfield, chairman of the commission, predicted the passage of the report through both branches of the Legislature with safe margins.

GAS KILLS TWO IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Oct 20 Arthur Armistead, 68, and his wife, Jessie, 67, of 12 Grove st., the Bradford section, were found dead in their home today, where they were accidentally overcome by gas from an unlighted jet in the kitchen.

The two, police say, were accidentally overcome and died last night after supper. They were discovered shortly before noon today by Walter E. Kimball of Howard st., an electrician, who went to their home to find out why Armistead had not reported for work.

New Tricks for Maternity Dresses

By Victoria Gaines

IT'S RIDICULOUS to think that a woman has to dress like a shapeless sack just because she's going to have a baby. Of course it's true that most maternity dresses, far from being flattering, make figures look even worse when the filling-out stage arrives—but there's one good shop in town where they believe a woman can be modish, though maternal. They've practically ransacked the town market—but they've finally found it—the perfect maternity dress! It has shoulder wings that help balance the bustline when it begins to enlarge, and an adjustable waistline that allows for any variations in width. What's more, it has the smartest stunt we've seen so far—a combination of the surplice line and straight front panel—the two most flattering fashions for mothers-to-be.

They also have a tweed topcoat that's so swagger and English-looking that you'd never dream there's a "blessed event" figure underneath! And then there's a short, waist-length nightgown of crepe and lace—a bright idea because they don't like long, trailing nighties in hospitals, you know. Yet it's lacey and fussy enough at the top to give you all the coquettish charm of a bed jacket!

Being Brilliant

Being brilliant about your evening clothes is simple this season—what with all the sparkling, scintillating gadgets around town. First, we had the metallic cloths, then sequins and rhinestones, now we have beading—the newest trick is being brilliant without being Broadway-ish! There isn't anything overdone about these beaded frocks—none of your all-over beaded embroideries this season!—just a discreet touch of crystal, cut steel or bugle beading placed where it will do the most good. For those of us who like to be a bit gay but not garish about our "going places" clothes, we recommend the beaded frock.

New Angel Hats

Just as we were getting a bit tired of zakish-looking hats pulled down over one eye, along come angelic-looking hats turned away back from the face. These new hats have brims that roll back off the forehead and swoop down in back, making a sort of halo around your head. They're right in line with the back movement in fashion that's giving our collars, capes and skirts that smart "thrown-back" look. And they seem to show that women want hats that do something for them—that frame their faces flatteringly and form a background for their heads. All of which the new hats do perfectly—besides giving you a wide-eyed, innocent air that's most appealing.

• • •

CONSTANCE L., Brooklyn.

Answer: You can easily carry out a brown color scheme throughout your costume—brown felt hat, brown suede or leather gloves, brown leather bag and shoes. Or you might match your hat to your suit—a green felt hat with a brown feather to tie it up to your brown accessories. About your blouse, you can wear either green, brown or beige crepe in one of the soft jabot or scarf tie blouses that are so smart. And we should suggest a dash of dull gold jewelry, to add a contrasting color note to the ensembles that will nevertheless harmonize with the browns and greens.

BABY LE ROY knows exactly when and what to wear. The picture on the left is a snappy blue gingham play suit with red dots. And on the right he is wearing a tailored motoring outfit in beige suede. Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Hackneyed phrases pop up in speech as well as in "the written word." In the few choice selections which follow you may find pet phrases of your own or your favorite abominations: The scenes he loved so well. The irony of fate. The pity of it! More in sorrow than in anger. The outer man. The inner man. Too funny for words. There's the rub. My better half. Not wisely, but too well. More sinned against than sinning. So—let's not do it.

By Baby Leroy

My idea of a wardrobe is a pair of overalls and an Indian suit, but my mother says, "No siree. You've got to have a wardrobe just like Marlene Dietrich."

Well, we spent about a week shopping for my winter finery, and I'm just about all tuckered out what with salesladies kissing and hugging me.

It seems that now I start the day in a snappy blue gingham play suit, with the cutest red dots on it. My mother says it will tub well, whatever that means.

Then there is a tailored motoring outfit, dashing but not gaudy, in beige suede. It is a three-piece affair, with a swell visitor's cap, a belted coat (hot cha), and a pair of leggings. I think these leggings are sissy, but mother says I'll be glad I have them when winter comes.

MY SUNDAY suit, which does not appear here, will "wow 'em." It is the latest gasp in knitted wear, yellow with brown accents. Of course, there is a pair of white wool horses on the front of the sweater that I call downright "swash," but then my mother thinks they are "just too cute for words."

Although it is a little early for winter sports, I'm already for that skiing and skating with a really proper costume. This one is all white (what I can do to it in five minutes*) including sweater, cap, mittens and leggings. I really fancy mine in this outfit, sort of manly looking, if you know what I mean.

Look Ahead as You Make Clothes

By Margaret Matson

THIS IS SLIGHTLY different from the usual fashion report. It has to do with choosing patterns rather than ready-to-wear. Theoretically there should be no difference and yet there usually is. We have come to think of home-made as a belittling adjective.

It shouldn't be; and now that more and smarter women are making their own clothes, it isn't going to be. There is a time element, however, which has to be realized. We buy ready-to-wear and wear it out of the shop. To us it is an immediate fashion. With patterns, we buy them one day and wear them several days or several weeks later, and much can happen in the interim.

Most of the patterns available today have high necklines, draped, scarved, or otherwise done up snugly. That seems good, for we expect that the high neckline is due to remain with us for several months.

The better patterns have subdued shoulders. That, too, seems wise, for doubtless before the last basting thread has been removed, the exaggerated shoulder effects will be dead. Puffed sleeves, fulness above the elbow—unless it is very discreet—are two things we should be cautious of. Sleeves in many of the newer dresses have their fulness at or below the elbow. The bell cuff is good.

Peplums are just coming in. Basques likewise. And the jacket that cuts off about at the wrist and flares from the waistline is seen in the better shops. These are things to emulate.

Hemlines are about nine or ten inches from the floor. They may go a bit lower this winter and then start up in the spring. In the evening, one should have a slight train. And if she's sufficiently daring, a boldly slashed skirt. One sees them in most of the better models, and one can find them in patterns as well.

The Marry-Go-Round; Dice Loaded

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALL OF THIS analytic discussion over the respective "standards" of men and women in matters of love and marriage may be highly diverting; but it is a waste of time and good black ink. Because Old Dame Nature settled the whole question 'way back before the monolithic Age, when the first dinosaur met his mate.

Helen Rowland

• • •

"Woman has nothing to gain by adopting man's standards," writes a young woman from Texas. "She should be an inspiration for the single standard: but that standard should be her own high standard—not man's."

On the other hand, Miss Sheilah Graham, that startling young writer from England, says: "I would not divorce a man I loved simply because he had affairs with other women." And she goes on to prove that a man may be dead in love with his wife, and at the same time quite alive to the charms of other women.

And THAT is just where Old Lady Nature loaded the dice!

A man MAY adore his wife, even while he is holding another woman in his arms. But no WOMAN can double-cross a man, so long as she honestly loves him. She can't even SEE another man.

Capes Are Dramatic

PICTURESQUE floor-length capes of velvet, dramatically lined in contrasting colors, are the newest wrinkle in the mode. Many of them have back-flung cowl effects, like monks' robes.

The hip-length cape of fur is new and striking—if you can afford it. If you can't, a furless cape of velvet is just as effective.

• • •

Pattern

If your fingers itch for a needle try making your own clothes. It's the new smart diversion. Pictured is a decidedly style-right suit. Should you wish to know where you can procure the pattern, please write us enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Low Lights and Music Bring Delight

By Therese Deschamps

PERHAPS—the soft lights have something to do with it. Or, the velvety rugs, the snowy damask, the efficient waiters—but tea-time in the more conservative spots in Boston brings one up on the tiptoes with a gasp and the assertion that there are some of the loveliest women in the country—here.

Two young matrons from Newton were sipping their tea yesterday. One was blonde, with large brown eyes, and the other had light brown hair and hazel eyes. Both were dressed in town tweeds, the kind that fit and look pressed. Evidently our attractive Newtonians had been shopping.

From Campus

We had barely arrived at our second muffin when three young women breezed in and for the life of us we couldn't place them outside the campus of Wellesley. Thy looked delightfully outdoorsy with high color and pert noses and had the only bobbed heads in the room at that moment.

Not the tight curled variety of bobs, let us add hastily, but wayward curls that looked careless but weren't.

Other couples and trios dropped softly into our midst and a pleasant murmur of conversation and cigaret smoke filled the luxurious room.

Eyes Brighter

Were we mistaken or did the eyes seem brighter, the cheeks warmer-hued as the tea hour closed snugly about us? Glancing hastily about, there wasn't a powder puff in sight—or a single nose which didn't look quite perfect. There wasn't a woman who looked made up and probably there wasn't one who had not cleverly called art to her aid.

In our quest for beauty we are asking members of the smart set for their favorite salons, hairdressers and the like. Today we mention the name of a hairdresser who specializes in styling the hair for the older woman. If you will mention a self-addressed stamped envelope with your request, we will be glad to forward this information to you.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Petite

Question: I am 23 years, 5 ft. 1 in., and weigh 123 pounds. What should my correct weight be? Lately my hair has been falling out. Can you suggest a remedy for this? I have light hair, blue eyes and very white skin, what shade of makeup should be best suited for me for evening use? My arms have broken out with a rash.—T. M., Lawrence.

Answer: Weight is dependent upon the individual structure of the body, whether it is large or small. You are probably a few pounds overweight, and need exercise and a sane method of eating to round you off a bit. Massage your hair each night and morning. If dry, use an oil treatment, if not massage and try a dry shampoo. Evening makeup is dependent upon the color of your frock. With the new rich dark shades so popular, a creamy powder, vivid lipstick with a shading of blue, violet eye-shadow, and a natural rouge probably will do it. Your arms may be dry from their exposure to the sun, try a good muscle oil, or see your druggist and have him prescribe an ointment.

Erasing Scars

Question: I have three marks on my cheek left from chicken pox. Will you please tell me how I can make these marks less noticeable? One mark is rather deep. Thank you.—Mrs. A. B. C., Lowell.

Answer: The skin peels gradually and any scar will, in time, grow fainter. If you want to hasten this process, we can give you the name of a paste that will remove the first layer of skin slowly and in an imperceptible manner. This will make the scar that is deep fainter, but will not remove it entirely.

—PANDORA TELLS YOU—

DEAR PANDORA:

Both my husband and myself have for years been tremendous riding enthusiasts, and every morning enjoy a canter together . . . either permitting. However, for the past few months has been forced to take the ride alone, and there is where the trouble started.

It has long been my habit, when riding, to rest my horse at a certain drinking place which is situated along the bridal path. After the horse had cooled off, I would allow him to take a small drink, and after a cigarette, which I would smoke, though the horse puffed—we would proceed.

The catch in this was that the fountain happened to be quite near to the home of a former suitor of mine [illegible] whom my husband [illegible] and as to dislike. [illegible] not [illegible] husband heard [illegible] of my [illegible] three [illegible] and then came the climax. The other day my husband decided to take the time to [illegible] on the morning run. The horse I had selected had not been exercised for some days and was very spirited. You can imagine my surprised chagrin when, without any warning whatever he suddenly bolted and ran [illegible] to the barn of the former beau. I was embarrassed [illegible] and my better half [illegible] Since then we have [illegible] but I beker [illegible] It has been a constant [illegible] How can I prove [illegible] that his suspicions are [illegible]

EQUESTRIENNE

DEAR EQUESTRIENNE:

You are what I would call, in short, a victim of circumstances with reverse horseshoes. In other words, unless you can explain the whole thing sensibly to your husband, and convince him so will even get to hate the horse. In brief his anger will mount. He will bridle up despite his girth and will halter your other activities. Don't let him stall.

Obviously your husband has been rather overwrought from the strain of his office work, and is in just the right frame of mind for such thoughts. Husbands get that way . . . often.

Sooner or later you will be able to show him the absurdity of his convictions, and you will be un-hobbled again. However, you plainly lost control, if not of yourself, at least of the horse, and perhaps, it remains to be seen, of the husband. By careful casting of the rope you can lead him back to the corral, so keep the gate open, and give him a chance to atone.

Tallyho, to say nothing of yoicks.

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

MONEY SPEAKS! IS A STATEMENT OPEN TO DEBATE. Yet nobody should give it serious thought. Not that one would ignore the power that money has wielded, nor discount the good it can do. But to hold it as the alpha and omega of happiness, or even of success, is unfortunate. To apply the money standard alone to everything (and this today we are finding out more than ever before) is the least intelligent way of measuring true values.

The expensive article is not necessarily the article of good taste, and to think that because it [illegible] friends will esteem it highly is the greatest of errors.

Money can open the way to many opportunities. It can make journeying luxurious, give leisure for learning, increase one's chances for seeing beautiful things and studying arts and sciences. It can provide many of the means for attainment, but it cannot give the character, the ability or the adaptability to take advantage of them. There is definitely a language that money cannot speak, but that language has been woefully neglected, but with the gathering clouds of Depression, have you noticed that the one golden rift is the undeniable and great humanizing spirit that has enveloped our friends and acquaintances. They are more charming and the vulgar affluences that money can achieve is passing with the destruction of many other worthless ideas.

The ability of people to meet and have a simple good time is becoming more and more pronounced.

MRS. LOTHROP WITHINGTON

Reading Club Meets

THE FIRST MEETING of the season of the Monday Afternoon Reading Club, of Brookline proves that money is banal. This organization, established some 15 years ago, meets at the homes of its members in Brookline Chestnut Hill and Cambridge. Simple in its origin it remains simple in its purport. One member reads aloud a worthwhile literary production of the season while the other members, numbering some 35, sew or knit. And they really do! After the reading tea is served by the hostess of the occasion, and the guests depart with the feeling that something definite has been accomplished beside the pleasure of seeing one's friends.

The first meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Homer Albers 73 Irving st., Brookline.

Mrs. Norman Smith also of Brookline, attended in a modish ensemble of green and brown. Her clothes are always tailored. In other words she is not the fluffy ruffly variety, but the clean cut tailored type who look so well in sport clothes in vogue at the moment.

MRS. BARBARA RUSSELL PARIS, who summered at Cohasset and is now established in her winter quarters in Brookline chose gray for her afternoon ensemble.

Mrs. Homer Albers, always a gracious hostess, wore a Delph blue short-sleeved sport frock.

Mrs. Parker Hayden, animated as usual, wore a brown ensemble, to complement her brunette coloring.

Mrs. Frederick Pratt of Chestnut Hill has a very becoming hair cut on which she pins a neat fitting little brown felt turban. But it is the hair softly waved about her face and curling at the ends that has made such a difference in her smart appearance.

Matron Has New Bob

ANOTHER YOUNG WOMAN whose hair cut is especially becoming to her is Mrs Lothrop Withington who wears what her friends call "Her Chrysler Hat," because of the two little wings on the side, and the fluttery look it lends the ensemble. Mrs. Withington attended the reading club meeting wearing a navy blue fitted silk. Although she has a family of seven strapping youngsters, she appears about 18 years old in those very flattering white ruffles and cuffs.

Mrs. Richard Clark Floyd, has a way of dressing that makes her outstanding. Of course she has that definite quality called "charm" to begin with. The wearing of smart clothes is nothing of itself. But that indefinable feminine charm is a very decisive element in determining the ultimate chic of an ensemble. Mrs. Floyd whose hair is dark has thought revealing brown eyes.

She chose for her striking costume a neatly fitted black frock, black felt hat and dainty suede afternoon shoes. Probably the most outstanding thing about her was the absence of embellishment and you know how smart that is on just the right person.

Mrs. Charles Bartlett, whose dramatic ability makes her greatly in demand as a reader, brought a touch of "Russian" to the assemble in a very smart taupe and brown plaid with a matching fez that definitely suggested the Sky" or "Loff.

Striking in Blue

MRS. CHARLES MATZ, strikingly beautiful blonde of Fisher ave Brookline wore a Yale blue and white checked sport rig with rope of gold color. That shade of blue is particularly becoming to the lady with golden hair, fair skin and blue eyes.

Mrs. Robert M. Green wore a brown ensemble with a blouse of soft peach that was particularly nice on her. The mother of eight, Mrs. Green finds time for her social engagements despite the demands of a growing family.

Mrs. Sherman Damon of Sponner rd., Chestnut Hill, gave a touch of color to the group in wearing a tweed that echoed the shade of autumn foliage.

MRS. CHARLES PURDY, of Wellesley, wore a blue and white check dress with tricky sleeves and dark blue hat and coat. She is another of the young ladies of fashion who has achieved an adorable hair cut.

Mrs. Ralph Hornblower

Mrs Ernest Soupy wore a high necked, smartly-cut henna frock with one of those excited little tip-tilt hats.

Mrs Hon Stewart attended in a fascinating shade of mauve (as you know one of those difficult shades to explain, with a stylish cape effect and matching hat.

Mrs. Braxton Morton, of Beacon Hill, wore a wee velvet hat dipped far over the right eye, a high brown velvet collar and a very trim sport frock.

Eden Suddenly Tells Jerry That She Does Not Want to Be Kissed Then by Him

HOW THE STORY STARTED

From the moment Jerry Evans met beautiful Eden Lane he knew she was different from other girls and he was in doubt as to just what approach to make. He is surprised when she does not join him in a drink. Eden abstained for several reasons; mainly because her mother had died in an automobile accident resulting from too many cocktails and a man Eden cared for had acquired a wife that way.

NOW READ ON—

CHAPTER 2

"I see," he told her now, considering her gravely. "You're probably quite right. I don't go in for it in any big way, myself. I like to think I can take it or leave it alone. My New England instinct of moderation, I suppose."

"You're from New England?"

Her head lay tilted back against the dull flowered chintz of the divan, the subdued light fell softly on her face, on the long warm curve of her throat, on the deep ivory triangle between her breasts, where the green of her gown rose in two inverted V's to her shoulders.

"Yes—from Vermont. And you?" He was conscious of a curious feeling of excitement—someway, all at once, everything about her seemed important. Oddly inevitable. He leaned forward a bit, his eyes interested.

"I've lived in New York for the last five years; before that —" she shrugged, concluded briefly, "I was born in Ohio—in Dayton."

"I see." He scowled slightly. He felt that she had implied that a great deal had happened between the time she had been born in Ohio—and the five years she had lived in New York.

He said: "You're—quite alone?"

"Quite."

She reached for a cigarette and he jumped up and held his lighter to its tip. In the light of the sputtering little flame, her mouth looked very inviting—very attainable. He deliberated for a split second, slipped the tiny silvery oblong back into his pocket and went back to his chair. He would kiss her, of course, eventually. That was what all this was for—the gentle light, the tray holding those frosted bottles and crisp little crackers, the music that trembled with muted breath about them. All just preliminary to the moment when he would kiss her. But this was not the moment.

He slid down in his chair until his head touched its low back, regarded her from between partly closed lids. "Do you go to Swifty's parties—often?"

"I wouldn't say—often. I go occasionally. When nothing better offers. Swifty is a nice boy—but he drinks too much. I should have had to come home alone tonight, for instance."

"I doubt that. Jake Pierson gave me a nasty look——"

"He needn't have. I should still have come home alone."

"You mean—you'd have turned Jake down?"

"Yes."

"You don't like him?" Jerry was eyeing her narrowly, aware that he was learning things about her rapidly. Rather surprising things.

"Yes, I like him. But he's married."

She shook her head. "No—she's out in Arizona. In a sanitarium. You see?"

"Of course." Jerry had a fleeting feeling that she asked Jake Pierson—that if it hadn't been for that girl in Arizona—He said, "Too bad—tough for Jake."

"Yes. She may live for several years—out there. His work is here. I don't imagine a publicity man, even as good a one as Jake, would stand much of a chance getting a job in Arizona, do you?" She laughed a bit huskily, her eyes avoiding his. "Jake's doing well here—she's being taken care of nicely. He married her," she added quickly, with a sort of forced deliberateness, "when he was drunk."

"I see." He didn't see at all. He had a brief picture of Jake Pierson—tall, a little slouch-shouldered—reckless young eyes in an old face—a slow, attractive voice. Brilliant as hell he was, even when it to the ears.

"I'm glad you didn't come home alone. I'm glad you let me come with you. I think you're—lovely-looking—and sort of sweet——"

It was the sort of thing that he said often, and quite instinctively. And now, oddly enough, it made him a little sad to remember this. He wished vaguely but quite honestly that he had saved it. Never said it before, until now when, most unexpectedly, he found himself meaning it terribly. He set his glass down carefully, locked his fingers together. "Are you glad—I feel like that about you."

She met his eyes steadily, her head still tilted back against the cushions of the divan. He wondered suddenly if it was the shadows or if her eyelashes were really as long and oddly straight as they seemed

"I think," she decided slowly, "that I am particularly glad."

"You mean—you like me?"

Her eyes clung to his gently. "What difference does it make—what I mean? Do we ever know ourselves? I suppose I do like you, though. I like what I see when I look at you—your tallness and the way your hair grows on your forehead and the little trick you have of smiling—suddenly and quite intimately. I like your eyes, too. They tell me things before you do. Yes, I suppose I like you very much."

Jerry flushed warmly and unexpectedly. "You're very direct. Most girls would have—dissembled."

"Yes," she agreed slowly. "I suppose they would. But at 2 o'clock in the morning—it seems a bit pointless, don't you think?" She smiled at him gravely, her lips parting unwillingly.

Jerry stood up abruptly. He was terribly aware of himself in that moment—and of her, and of this room that held them so gently. A palely lighted room, that smelled of young April air and violets

"I thing anything is pointless—except this—he bent to her swiftly, put his arms about her, drew her unprotesting to her feet. He held her lightly in the hollow of his left arm, tipped her face up with his right hand. For a moment she yielded to him, then she moved her head, evading his lips. "What's the matter?" he asked abruptly, his voice a husky whisper against her cheek, "don't you want to be kissed?"

She shook her head slowly. "I'm sorry, but I find suddenly that—I don't."

He laughed unsteadily, a little angrily

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"I'm afraid you must believe it."

He scowled darkly. "So you're the sort of girl who waits until the last possible minute—and then dissembles—"

"No: it's simply that I've just just discovered that I don't want to be kissed by you—inadvertently."

"What in blazes do you mean—inadvertently?" His arms held her but quite impersonally

"That is what it would be, wouldn't it?" she demanded with a sort of fierce evenness. "You would kiss me exactly as you just drank that Scotch highball—because it was indicated. And like the highball—it would excite you for the moment and that is all. Tomorrow, neither the drink nor the kiss would have any more importance to you than yesterday's weather."

He dropped his arms slowly. "I don't follow you at all—but it's only up to you. I never argue about a drink or a kiss."

The outcome of the kiss episode is most interestingly told in chapter 3 tomorrow. The men of this interesting new novel develops quickly and anyone should start reading it as soon as not to lose a single bit.

Oven Cooking Allows Reduction in Kitchen Costs if Menus Are Planned Ahead

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

ALL OF US are trying to keep down our bills these days, and I don't know of a better way of cutting costs in the kitchen than planning at least one oven cooked meal a week—that is, a dinner in which all the main dishes can be baked at one time.

It does take a little thought, however, to plan appetizing combinations that can be cooked at about the same temperature, so perhaps these three menu suggestions may be helpful:

MENU NO. 1
Melon
Baked Chicken Cones
Sweet Potato Roulettes
Scalloped Tomatoes
Celery and Grated Carrot Salad
French Dressing
Crisp Rolls Butter Peach Jam
Individual Orange Sponge Shortcakes
Coffee

Mix cooked ground chicken with a thick white sauce. Add chopped parsley, salt, paprika. When the mixture is cold, form into small cones and roll each in sifted buttered bread crumbs. Arrange in buttered utility dish. To diced sweet potatoes add butter, salt, pepper, and enough hot milk to moisten. Heat until light and arrange in cakes or roulettes on buttered pie plate. Drain some of the liquor from one can of tomatoes. Add salt, pepper, few drops onion juice. Place in buttered casserole and sprinkle top thickly with buttered crumbs

Make hot water sponge cake and fill greased cups half full of mixture. Serve with whipped cream and oranges cut into small pieces.

MENU NO. 2
Corned Beef au Gratin
Baked Sliced Potatoes
Baked Tomatoes
Cheese and Onions, Cress Salad
Bread, Butter Mustard Pickle
Canned Peaches
Tea Cake Coffee

Combine cooked, chopped corned beef, medium white sauce, minced celery, onion, salt, paprika and beaten egg. Four into greased custard cups.

Slice cooked potatoes into greased utility dish. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and bits of butter.

Mix tea cake and pour into greased pie plate

Bake the four dishes about 20 minutes in a hot oven, 450 deg. F

For Cress Salad: Chill the cress and arrange it on salad plates. Sprinkle with diced cucumber and shredded green pepper. Serve with French Dressing.

MENU NO. 3
Baked Codfish
Scalloped String Beans
Cabbage, Celery, Green Pepper Salad
Thousand Island Dressing
Bread and Butter
Currant Conserve
Orange Shortcake
Whipped Cream
Coffee

Combine prepared codfish with mashed potatoes and shape into small flat cakes. Roll in egg yolk and milk and then in fine bread crumbs. Arrange codfish cakes in greased utility dish and dot with butter.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST
Sliced Bananas
Cereal
Rolls Butter
Preserves

LUNCH
Pan-Fried Liver
Fried Potato Cakes
Bread and Butter
Stewed Pears Cookies
Tea

DINNER
Broiled Lamb Chops
Scalloped Potatoes
Browned Parsnips
Bread and Butter
Apple Tapioca Pudding
Coffee

"It's saving Money" ON MY MILK BILLS

I'VE discovered a thrifty little trick. I'm cooking and baking with White House Milk. And you'd be surprised if you knew the difference it makes in my milk bills. I'm saving money."

"But . . . forgetting economy for the moment . . . let me tell you about the difference it makes in my meals. White House makes my cream sauces richer . . . my custards smoother . . . my creamed vegetables creamier. You see, I save money and get better milk-made dishes in the bargain."

White House Milk is real milk . . . all milk and only milk . . . with about 60 per cent of its natural water evaporated away (Fluid milk—fresh from the cow—contains 87% water).

White House is twice as rich as ordinary milk. And there is no better evaporated milk made.

Both heads of the house have a chance to win these 85 WEEKLY CASH PRIZES!

"Why does your family prefer La Touraine Coffee?" is a question Mr. and Mrs. New Englander may not agree upon! He may say it's La Touraine's superb flavor. She may say it's because the family is always sure of perfect coffee with La Touraine.

Difference of opinion is what we want — and are ready to pay for! Men and women have equal chances of collecting this week's 85 cash prizes! One or the other will get the $100 first prize. But there's $50 each for the man and woman who write the two second best letters! And 82 more prizes of from $30 to $1 that don't care who wins them!

We could write volumes about how La Touraine is made . . . how we select the several varieties of choicest coffees that New Englanders prefer . . . carefully blend them for body, for flavor, for fragrance . . . roast them to perfection by the distinctive "Boston roast" . . . then rush La Touraine to your grocer to be sure it's delivered fresh to you. We might remind you that in La Touraine you pay for highest coffee quality — not fancy and expensive packages. But we are paying to find out why you like it!

So get a pound of La Touraine today. Ask for the drip grind or the percolator grind — then enjoy New England's idea of perfect coffee and speak for yourself!

HERE ARE THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

For best letter written by man or woman	$100.00
For second best letter, written by woman	50.00
For second best letter, written by man	50.00

By AUSTEN LAKE

The six-day riders are a polyglot crew, assembled from the ends of the earth, as strange an assortment of human machines as can be found in the world of sport. Which explains why Jack Neville, their chief trainer, has a mouth set in a tight, cynical pucker with nest of fibrous wrinkles around his eyes from squinting suspiciously. A pine knot of a little man, built of tubular steel and piano wire like an oversized jockey, with pin points of white light in his eyes and a way of snapping his words like the flick of a whip.

"Feed 'em, keep 'm clean, and make 'em go," is the way Jack summarizes his job. But it is more complex than that, for he is a combination parent, father confessor, male nurse and drill sergeant, who can scold a rider in four languages, make a poultice, set a fracture, make a cake or fetch you a very stiff kick in the breeches.

You see if there is a sudden jam on the track in which the riders come tumbling down like a mass of spilled groceries, one or more of the riders are apt to slump on their spines and render up loud soul noises like they were fit to be swept up and carted off to the emergency ward. The referee's bell will declare an armistice and, while the field slows down to a mere roll, Jack goes out to succor the injured and decide whether their hurts are genuine or only counterfeit.

If it is a Frenchman or a Belgian, Jack will lean over and grate, "Qu'avez vous, cochon? Leves a pied tout suite or I'll smack you on the kisser." Jack is very handy with French. Or, if the collapsed rider is German, Jack will yelp, "Vas iss los, louse? Machst on on that bike or I'll put gasoline in your schnitzel."

The point is Jack is paid to know which of the riders are flagrant sleepers who will throw a bogus spasm to get a five minute vacation from pumping around the saucer ("Some of these birds'll fall off their wheels and take a skinned knee or a bruised rib for the sake of a little breather") and which are the hardy, human buzz saws who never sham a hurt and will get up from a tumble and shag after the field.

First 24 Hours Are the Hardest

"One of our wops gets spilled last night and rolls around like he is slaughtered," said Neville, talking through his teeth and leering sidewise for emphasis. "So I talk to him in Eyetalian and say, 'You ain't hurt none.' So he does a folk dance and implores the crowd to witness his agonies. Finally I say 'Get up or get out.' He rides off and first crack he puts on a spurt that laps the field."

Oddly enough the hardest part of the six-day grind comes during the first 24 hours of racing when the men are hardening to the grind after several weeks of lying around. Then they develop blisters, chafing, gas pains and stomach sickness that keeps Neville and his staff hopping around with bottles of soda, soothing ointments and rolls of adhesive. For the race must go on, and a shoe blister that would keep a baseball player out for a week, requires a scant two minutes to patch with adhesive.

Most of all the riders get sore sterns from sitting on the lean, leather wedges that look less like saddles than they do like split sash herrings, and then Neville must apply a 20 per cent solution of cocaine mixed with lanoline to deaden the pain.

"Years ago we used to let the men sit on a thickness of raw beefsteak," said Jack, "But the steak would slip out of position after a bit, so now we just give them a little pain-killer and let 'em grind away."

Six-day riders defy all the laws of athletic diet, and where a college football trainer will feed his squad sparingly a sliver of cold roast beef and a baked potato several hours before game time and warn his men away from all liquids, it is nothing to see a 130 six-day rider bolt a huge porterhouse, four poached eggs, a couple of mutton chops, a pitcher of orange juice and a large bowl of custard, and then go out and ride furiously while his mate sits down to dine.

Not Much Fun, but Plenty of Food

Usually there is a bowl of some liquid, fruit juices or the white of several eggs, and a platter of salad on the top of the little square kennels where the riders loll between tricks. And on the track the riders are constantly chewing at celery stalks so that they have done in eight crates of Fanuel Hall's best product already.

"We had an Eyetalian named Linare at Chicago a few years ago who ate $135 worth of stuff in six days," said Neville, adding, "That's an all time record."

Last April, during Boston's last six-day race, the athletes ate 600 pounds of steak, 190 dozens of eggs, 302 pounds of lamb chops, 125 chickens, 26 crates of oranges, 113 gallons of milk, 67 pounds of butter, not to mention a quantity of lesser stuffs like spinach cheese, olives, etc.

Considering that six-day racing is the most monstrous, body wracking and spirit deadening athletic event in the world, excepting only marathon running, it is curious that the men submit to its torture for the sake of uncertain profits. I asked Felix Le Fevre why he did it and he said, "I hate it. It's murder, and every race I ride I keep saying, 'Never again. I'm through after this one.' Then I get a couple of weeks' rest, I say, 'Well, I'll give it another whirl.'"

I have heard veteran army sergeants curse the routine of their life only to re-enlist after each hitch, and college football players foreswear the game in November to report the following September in a lather of enthusiasm. So that the memory of hardship is shortlived. There is scarcely any profit for the riders in this Boston race, in which they share 35 per cent of the receipts. But in Chicago, where they go next week, and in New York, individual wages run from $150 to $500 a day with extra prize money and bonuses on the side.

Canadiens Put Leduco on Block

Montreal, Oct. 20 (INS)—Lester Patrick's blue-shirted New York Rangers, world's hockey champions, reported here today for the 1933-34 season. The players will sign contracts today and Patrick is expected to start the first practice Saturday.

The champions open their season on November 11 at Toronto against the Leafs. While the Rangers were gathering, officials of Les Canadiens announced that Albert Leduc, defense player, was on the market.

Onward Gridiron Soldiers -:- -:- On to Fordham and Victory

Coach Joe McKenney riding ahead, Capt. Frank Maloney in the rear, the big train of Boston College roared into New York today for its head on collision with Fordham tomorrow.

B.C. Frolics on Eve of Big Tilt

New York Oct. 20—On the short end of 10 to 8 odds, figures which lengthened considerably during the past 24 hours, Boston College today repairs to the Polo Grounds for one last session of practice for the all important game with Fordham at the Polo Grounds tomorrow afternoon.

Taking advantage of an early arrival in New York last evening, Coach Joe McKenney saw to it that his entire squad of 35 players enjoyed a full night's unbroken sleep.

An early dinner followed by a show at one of the down town theaters tonight and then into bed for another restful pre-game sleep is expected to find the Eagles ready for the meeting between two undefeated untied and unscored on teams.

RAMS WELL SCOUTED

The thorough manner in which Coaches McKenney, Ormsbee and McNamara have scouted the powerful Fordhamites for weaknesses of talented backs who wear the Boston College colors, and the able defense which has been constructed to stop the unrelenting Fordham attack, have given the Eagles an optimism which should stand them in good stead in the face of overwhelming odds.

That Fordham is taking nothing for granted in the renewal of its ancient rivalry with the Boston foe, that "Shipwreck Jim" Crowley realizes that he has a task on his hands in annexing a victory over the team that he was within a scant driving his squad through their final workouts.

DANOWSKY STARTS

Crowley plans to use his regular by announced starting backfield of Ed Danowski, counted a leading scorer at left half, Joe Manaci at right half, and Tom Reynolds, former Rindge Tech scholastic star fullback; three regulars who average better than 175 pounds.

While he is as yet undetermined whether to start Freddy Harris, former Cambridge Latin star, or Frank McDermott of Charlestown and St. John's Prep at quarterback, it seems probable that his choice will be the latter with Harlow held in reserve.

McDermott is faster and more versatile while Harlow has that rare quality of getting the best out of the team that is within their power.

SLAMIN AT GUARD

The most important change in the line finds Jerry Slamin replacing Johnny O'Lalor at guard. With Dimy Zaitz at the other guard position the Eagles will have two 200-pounders who should be able to withstand the terrific assault heading their way from the three point Fordham backfields, which are rated the class of the East.

Wrestling Results

Camden, N. J.—Jim Browning, 220, Missouri, defeated Max Wagenheim, 240, Atlanta, two straight falls, 10 23 and 3 20.

Toronto—Ivo Valentic, 203 Yiles, Y, defeated Jack Washburn, 217, Los Angeles, two straight falls, 15 20 and 7 12; Walt Talbot, Edmonton, Born, 210, beat Yake Fitz, defeated Sam Leatherson, 211; Philadelphia, two of three falls.

PAOLINO SURE OF VICTORY

Rome, Oct. 20 (INS)—Public interest in Sunday's fight between Primo Carnera world heavyweight champion, and Paolino Uzcudun, Spanish challenger, rose to fever heat today.

A new rush of betting orders confirmed predictions of a record. A total of 65,000 persons, 20,000 of them standees, is expected to witness the battle.

While his managers are predicting victory by a knockout in the latter rounds, Paolino has confined his own ballyhoo to a daily statement reading:

"I am sure of victory."

As his last piece of training, Carnera fought a full 15 rounds with sparring partner to test out his stamina in view of the contention of Paolino's manager that the Basque will wear Primo down for 13 rounds before striking for the knockout punch.

Petrolle Favored to Beat Fuller

New York, Oct. 20 (INS)—Petrolle Fargo, N. D., Swedish was a 7 to 5 favorite today over Sammy Fuller, Boston fighter, in their fight here tomorrow night. The Dakota veteran will have a five pound advantage in weight over his Boston rival.

Pat O'Shocker 'Darling' of Detroit Society Folks

Detroit, Oct. 20 (AP)—All for jasm when they engaged him to art's sake, a bulky gentleman with an extra-size neck is ahead this town twisting the arms of social registerites of both sexes, dumping them on their ears and grimaces and grimaces instead of a man busily engaged in earning himself.

He is one Patrick O'Shocker, a disciple of the ancient Greek art of bone-cracking [illegible]—of others. Art is a serious matter for Mr. O'Shocker, by his own words and he wants to do something for art besides groaning and making artistic faces while fat on his back. He is a wrestler.

Society, planning to do something in a monster way for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, decided on a wrestling match as an unusual wedding of two ancient arts. They did not reckon with Mr. O'Shocker's artistic enthusiasm.

oppose Jim London "for the title and the $10,000 diamond studded belt" owned by London, in a charity match.

Mr. O'Shocker did a regular air plane spin into the midst of the proceedings.

"In my line," he said, proudly, "I also am an artist. See, let me show you my art!" Whereupon he twisted the neck of a portly dowager, deposited her suddenly on the floor and stood back smiling. After her first amazement the dowager was thrilled. She told her friends, and shortly Mr. O'Shocker was depositing other dowagers a few bold males and a sprinkling of debutantes, on polished drawing room floors, amid much grimacing posturing and excited screams.

In a brief time Mr. O'Shocker has become practically indispensable at private social gatherings.

George Owen, Bruins Defense Star, Retires

BRUINS YARD BIT

The retirement of Owen has left a gap in the Boston lineup that hasn't been filled so far in the training season. All the experienced players Manager Art Ross picked up this year were forwards and he has to look to his position for a capable relief man for Hitchman and Eddie Shore.

Dartmouth Invades Pennsy

HOLY CROSS, CRIMSON CLASH IN SELLOUT

60,000 Expected at Stadium Battle

With a sale of 30,000 tickets reported by the Harvard Athletic Association, the Harvard-Holy Cross game at the Stadium tomorrow afternoon appears due to be the first sellout of the season. The Stadium has a capacity of 60,000 at the most. But in addition to the number of seats already sold there are approximately 20,000 more reserved for season ticket holders. Holy Cross has already exhausted its supply at Worcester and has been clamoring for two days for more tickets. An average game day sale of 10,000 will fill the Stadium to bulging

At least seven of the undefeated, untied college elevens will fall from grace tomorrow, and four more, that have not tasted defeat but have been tied are confronted by such powerful opposition as to possibly bring about their downfall.

Over in the Stadium, Harvard and Holy Cross raised at this writing as the strongest in New England will clash. The Crimson, only tomorrow's conflict with victory over Bates and New Hampshire while the Crusaders have turned back little St. Michael's, Catholic University and Providence College. And, down in New Haven, Yale and Brown, two other undefeated untied elevens, will fight it out to the bitter end to remain on the roll of honor.

EAGLES-RAMS CLASSIC

Boston College and Fordham, the Polo Grounds attraction for the week-end, have not only vanquished three opponents, but they have not even been scored upon. HAVERHILL IS FAVORED OVER WALTHAM

By BILL CONNELL

Greater Boston scholastic football sweeps along in its best style tomorrow with important teams colliding with capable foes, and the smaller elevens evenly matched for the first time this season.

The first few weeks offered many setups but now the competition becomes faster and the strong teams need to be primed almost every Saturday.

WALTHAM TESTED

Unbeaten and untied Waltham and twice tied but unbeaten Haverhill meet in the major game. Haverhill is the choice, with its probable weight adge, and because Jim Falzone, Waltham kicker and best tosser, has a bad hand. If he plays he is likely to be below par.

But Haverhill had a terrific scoreless tie clash with Lynn Classical last Saturday, so is in the spot where a letdown would be natural. Waltham's chances are good.

Everett, with its perfect record and impressive play this year stands as the favorite to top Medford. Everett has plenty of replacements for its powerful first line and three sets of backs. The team has been just good enough to win each week without rolling up topheavy scores. With Joe Schwerdt, talented quarterback and Pini, Rosetti, Raimo, Gentile and the others carrying on a fast smart attack.

Medford is unbeaten in regular school competition. It trailed only Lynn E. Boy's opponents. Medford upset Lynn English and Somerville yet hardly figures to spill Everett. For sheer courage under fire Medford's team is remarkable, and with Capt. Bill Warren and Carl Razzo, ace tackles, leading the defense may be strong enough to check Everett.

EAGLETS AT DILBOY

Somerville is involved in one of the fine games of the day when it plays host to Boston College High at Dilboy Field. Somerville is favored, but expects a wild afternoon. B. C. High has a brilliant passing attack ready with Joe Horne hurling.

Newton was tripped by Everett last week, and will seek another stiff game tomorrow at Brockton where Coach Marion Roberts pupils are reported. With Joe Schwerdt, talented quarterback and Pini, Rosetti, Raimo, Gentile and the others carrying on a fast smart attack.

Revere goes to Bertram Field in Salem and as usual will give the Witches trouble. But won't top Bill Broderick's home team which has regained its victory pace after trailing Everett.

Malden treks to Lynn Stadium to meet battered English. With the home team on the short end of the odds, yet in a good position to surprise its guests. Malden has one of the best of the school quarterbacks in Joe Kelly and a strong supporting cast, so should stop English.

CLASSICAL CHOICE

Unbeaten Lynn Classical doesn't know what to expect when it heads for Quincy tomorrow. The home team is after a wonderful start and has come along fast with Coach Jimmy Lecain doing a fine job of re-organizing. Classical last Saturday had its stiff scrap with Haverhill. So may slip yet has sufficient reserve to come through here.

Framingham invading Fitchburg to play the latter's strong home eleven, Cambridge Latin at Arlington, another game where the home team is favored; Lowell at Nashua, Boston English at Groton, Natick at St. James of Haverhill; Revere at Melrose, a good take in and Rindge at Brookline are fine games.

Also Chelsea at Lawrence (the latter is very good); New Bedford at Taunton; Belmont at Maynard (don't miss it if you're in that district); Stoneham at Lexington, also very good; Concord at Winchester; Wakefield at Watertown and Milton at Needham.

Roger High goes down the lonesome road to Leominster, a lonesome road for any school team with Coach Cunningham's home team one of the best. And with a perfect record it intends to preserve.

Altogether a fine card. With many a tough and thrill for the paying fans who keep the program in motion.

More Eagle Than Ram -:- Maniaci on Wing

60,000 TO SEE STADIUM TILT

zaza and down in Shreveport, La. Arkansas expects to beat Coach Biff Jones' Louisiana State, whose record was slightly blemished by a tie with Centenary.

There is an unusual large number of outstanding football attractions on the morrow's list. For a real thriller, it will not be necessary for the local enthusiasts to journey farther than the Harvard Stadium.

CRIMSON AT FULL STRENGTH

Both Harvard and Holy Cross are more formidable than a year ago, when the Crimson took a 7-to-0 verdict on Dick Waters' fourth period touchdown. Unlike last season, when they played the Crusaders without three first-string back field men, Jack Crickard, Johnny Dean and Charlie Nevin and was obliged to carry on with a third-string center, due to injuries keeping Hallowell and Casey on the sidelines, the Sons of John Harvard will be practically at war strength tomorrow.

But, it will be well to bear in mind that Holy Cross will not field the mentally disturbed aggregation that represented Mt. St. James a year back. Internal dissension had broken out in the ranks of the Crusaders, and their coaches had been upended during the week of the Harvard game. Naturally, the general unhealthy disconcerted Holy Cross.

Three years ago, aided and abetted by Phil O'Connell, Holy Cross beat Harvard, 27 to 0 but has been on the losing end of the last two encounters, due to some degree, to a record-ace ad frequent mental lapses.

Dr. Eddie Anderson, the new mentor at Holy Cross, appreciates Harvard's strength and he has registered his opinion with his charges. Regardless of the outcome of the game if the Crusaders are taken by the Crimson the defeat cannot be attributed to overconfidence.

The Crusaders understand the seriousness of their assignment tomorrow. For a week or more they have listened to scouts expound of the kicking ability of Capt. Johnny Dean, the speed of Ryan Lane and Fritz Colman, and the passing of Danny Weiss. They know what they're up against and that only by playing Pitch-in football and heading down field start to finish can they hope to win.

TUFTS LOSES SIX STARS FOR TILT

By JOE CASHMAN

The eve of its home debut against Connecticut State finds the Tufts College eleven with six of its stars still on the hospital report and five of them definitely out of the game at the Oval tomorrow.

Dick Hingston, promising back who is a grippe victim, won't start but may see some action. Among who can't possibly play, according to Coach Lew Manley, are Captain McGonagle, veteran tackle who has a dislocated shoulder; Jones McMahon, first-string quarterback who has a head injury; Jones Parkhurst, veteran center, suffering from a fractured wrist; Borden, flashy half-back who limping and Gordon Linberg, experienced tackle who is a [illegible] tion.

RESERVES SAVE DAY

Fortunately the Jumbos are rich in classy reserve material and Coach Lew admits he'll be greatly surprised if his emergency lineup doesn't whip the Nutmeg State and keep clean the slate of the Medford eleven.

"I'm thankful, though, that we're meeting Connecticut State tomorrow instead of late in the season," Manley adds. Coach Dole's eleven is composed mainly of sophomores. These youngsters are big, strong and fast, but haven't got their bearings as yet. Inexperience rather than poor playing has been responsible for their defeats to date. They'll cause plenty of trouble before the season is over. They may even find themselves tomorrow. If they do, we'll be sure to miss our cripples."

WILL EXPERIMENT

The Tufts' mentor hopes tomorrow's conflict will be easy enough to permit him to do a little experimenting. In the games against Colby and Middlebury, the Jumbos jumped into the lead and then protected their advantage by playing defensive football. What they can flash in the way of a varied attack is a mystery.

Manly hopes to find out tomorrow by ordering his charges to take to the air and try out a few yet unrevealed running plays in preparation for the clashes with William and B. U. on the two following Saturdays.

Unless a last minute change is made, Tufts will start on the morrow with Clark, Stafford, Froelich and McLean in the backfield behind a line that will have Oliver and Grinnell at ends, Woodworth and Batchelder at tackles, Fox and Spaulding at guards and Carlyn at center.

NORWICH FACES WENTWORTH

Norwich, Vt., Oct. 20—Unscored upon and victorious in two previous games the newly organized Wentworth Institute football team, coached by Joe Tansey, former Norwich star and Clark School coach, tackles Norwich Junior Varsity here this afternoon.

The Boston team is naturally favorite on the strength of its record and is most anxious to make an impressive showing before a large body of Wentworth alumni who reside in and around Northfield. In playing Norwich, Coach Tansey returns to his alma mater, he was captain and outstanding player of the 1929 team.

Capt. Lane Fearon, former all-scholastic fullback at Manchester, N. H. is the local point of a strong Wentworth team.

Bike Grind Now Has Three in First

A dozen bike teams enter the next to the last day of hard riding at the Garden today.

Jack Sheehan and Frank Keating, the New York tandem, dropped out in the fourth day riding. Keating was unable to stand up under the terrific pace set by the leaders Dave Lands and Charlie Ritter.

Lands and Ritter are now tied with Reggie McNamara and Eddie Seuffert, and the Boston team of Hill and Crossley, for the lead.

Spectacular jamming in the sprints early this morning brought the veteran Austrian and his youthful Teuton partner up to the head of the pack for the triple tie.

Schoolboy Slants

By BILL CONNELL

With Hyde Park one of the better teams of the city it was favored to edge the Tradesmen who had all the stuff needed to make rough the pair for Capt. Walter Bracken and his Hyde Park mates.

Lawrence Academy went to Huntington Field today where it was to tackle Huntington School starting at 2:30 p. m. A year ago the teams fought to a scoreless tie. Each has a bit more scoring punch than last season, so today's game was due to produce more action than the last.

Belmont Hill at Roxbury Latin, Hebron Academy at Coby Frosh Weston high at Howe high, and Boston College Frosh at St. John's Prep were other attractions of this afternoon.

Leo Logue, Malden center, will be back in the lineup in a couple of weeks. Logue sustained a chipped shin and has been idle recently But the dented leg is coming along nicely and he'll toddle into battle soon.

Ram and B. C. Players Will Miss Tutor

At the convent of the Sister of St. Joseph in Framingham there is a novitiate who has more than an academic interest in the Boston College-Fordham football game tomorrow

More than one boy on both teams owes his present position in college to the efforts of a former teacher at Cambridge Latin School. Up to a short time ago Ruth Keyes was a tutor, living on Beacon st. Long a friend of the late Maj Cavanaugh she assisted some of the "Iron Majors" best players at Boston College and Fordham to keep up with their studies so they could play football.

BECAME FOOTBALL FAN

Jimmy Cowhig, Tony Sarsusky, Tom Brennan, Jack Cowhig, Freddie Harlow and other players on B. C. and Fordham elevens won't feel natural without Miss Keyes in the stands watching them tomorrow. For the little tutor, who began by cramming Latin into the heads already full of formations and signals, ended up by becoming a rabid football fan herself.

When Cavanaugh went to Fordham, Miss Keyes continued tutoring B. C. players under Joe McKenney. She had tutored McKenney himself when he was an undergraduate. But her sympathies remained with Cav. That's one reason why Fordham's team is 90 per cent Bostonian. Tony Siano, Adam Elcewicz, Walter Tracey and many others went there at her suggestion.

BRACELET OF FOOTBALLS

When Miss Keyes last visited Fordham it was to see a basketball game. She wore a bracelet of gold footballs which had been given her by her old boys. Always she insisted that her boys should fight with the same spirit exhibited by Cav, which helps explain why these B. C.-Fordham games are always so close.

Last month Cav passed on to his final reward. A few weeks later Miss Keyes entered the convent out in Framingham.

George Stakes Belt on Mat Result

Ed Don George has agreed to risk his $10,000 diamond studded championship belt when he defends his world's heavyweight wrestling title against Leo Numa in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden on next Friday night.

Mat champions in the past have usually tried to avoid putting the $10,000 belt at stake.

"Numa insists that you put up your $10,000 title belt," Paul Bowser told George.

"It's okay with me," replied Ed. "Let's do the thing right. If Numa licks me, he is entitled to the belt."

ST. JOHN'S PREP AT HEIGHTS

A reorganized Boston College freshman team will face a powerful St. John's Prep eleven at Newton at Dansers in the annual game between these two Catholic schools rivals.

The Danvers outfit has but two touchdowns scored on it this season, but has the undefeated Fordham yearlings on an intercepted pass and the other by the Holy Cross frosh.

This shipment is being made from Washington Park, Chicago.

Six Classes Fight in Iramerk Show

The Irish-American A. A. steps out into mid winter form next Monday night when it stages its weekly amateur boxing tournament. For the first time this year it will conduct six classes, including 126, 147, 160, 175 pounds and heavyweights open and 135 pound class for novices.

Shucco Rates Title Shot in Class

By MR. BOSTON

(Jack Conway assisting)

Just so as to make it unanimous I wish to declare Tony Shucco of the North End is one of the greatest light heavyweights in the world. In case you are one of those fussy birds who insist upon asking questions I'll add he can lick nine tenths of the heavyweights also.

I didn't have to go to the dinner Ausonia Council, K. of C., tossed for Shucco at the American House to come to this opinion. I've thought Shucco has been a $50,000 fighter for a year. The boy has everything, and all he needs is the opportunity to place him out front in the fistic parade.

Didn't he knock out Tuffy Griffiths? Griffiths has gone back a bit but fellows like Rip Valenti and myself are not knocking his head cold. Not with fists. I might get to first base if they would let me use a baseball bat.

Mayor Mansfield and fellow countrymen, I want to mention that Attorney Joseph A. Scoponetti acted like a veteran toastmaster at the Tony Shucco ceremonies. Joe was so good doing the Daniel Webster act that I thought he was making a speech in behalf of Mayor Curley or Bill Foley. Joe told what a great scrapper Shucco is, and also mentioned that other Italian athletes are going places. As if he had to mention that fact to me after the marvelous performances of Italian boxers, wrestlers and track and field men.

Daniel A. Nori, grand knight of Ausonia Council, talked about the progress of athletics, and said some fine things about the youthful Shucco.

Commissioner Felix A. Marcella, Osana Clementi and Dr. Frank M. Leonard also made speeches.

James Flannagan, district grand knight, represented Joseph M. Kirby, Massachusetts state deputy, K. of C. And he did a splendid job. Of course, James could not refrain from saying a few words about Eddie Shevlin, his old pal as well as about the promising Shucco.

Swingalong Stable Up on Auction Block

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 20 (AP)—All thoroughbred horses owned by the Swingalong Stud, except 20 1933 foals, will be consigned to E. J. Tranter's fall sales here, according to Harry S. Hart, managing director of the stud.

The foals, Hart said, in announcing that the stud will be disposed of, will be sold at the Saratoga yearlings sales next summer.

STREET'S BLAST BLAMING FRISCH IN CARDS' FLOP COST JOB

NOW VICTIM OF UNWRITTEN 'GAG RULE'

By JOE CASHMAN

So the grizzled old Devil Dog, who steered the Cardinals to pennants in 1930 and 1931 and to the world's championship in the latter season will spend the next baseball campaign in the minors, piloting the San Francisco Missions of the Pacific Coast League.

HAD MAJOR JOB WAITING

Gabby was all set to receive another major league contract when he was dropped in favor of Frankie Frisch in the Mound City early in August. He was besieged with offers upon retiring to his farm in Joplin. He even went so far as to announce that he would be sitting pretty in the main tent next season.

Then he let loose a torrid blast against Frisch:

"I'm sick and tired of reading how I let the Cards run wild and that Frisch is having his hands full maintaining discipline on the club," Gabby asserted.

"All my charges lived up to the rules until Frisch started to break them. I fined him at first, but the fines were always overruled. I was eventually forced to overlook his infractions and I couldn't, in fairness, complain about any of the other players doing what Frisch was getting away with. I would have kept order on the club if I had been supported in my efforts to make Frankie toe the mark."

GIVE THE CHILL

Street was doomed then and there. Those who had been heaping a path to his farmhouse seeking his signature to a contract suddenly had a complete change of heart and hustled home on the first buzzy that happened along.

The unsolicited are often mystified when some diamond character with no particular claim to fame is appointed to a coveted position where a flock of outstanding experienced leaders are available.

Invariably it's because the person appointed could hold his tongue better than those who were passed up.

Marty McManus was going to have a few things to say when he was officially let out as Red Sox boss. Cool-headed friends persuaded him to keep his mouth shut tight. There may or may not be an interesting story back of his discharge but if he ever makes it public he's crazy. The majors will not stand to have any of its dirty linen washed in the open.

ASK BILL McKECHNIE

Nobody has learned that lesson any better or with more profit to himself than Wilkinsburg Will McKechnie, Braves pilot. If anybody ever had cause to complain about receiving a raw diamond deal, Bill had when he was fired after leading the Pirates to a pennant and then experienced the same misfortune in St. Louis.

But Bill remained ever smiling and mum and see what it got him. A return job with the Cards a four-year contract with the Braves and now a new five-year contract at the Wigwam.

Rogers Hornsby, on the other hand, talked and the National League, after losing him from pillar to post, would have no more of him even though he gave it its only world's championship from 1925 to 1931.

Street talked and has back in the tall grass. The same is true of Dan Howley.

The successful big league leader is the man who confines his oratory to the playing field, bench and clubhouse with only his players as the audience.

Bear of a Guard Is Brown Ace

They say it's news when a man bites a dog. Well, be prepared for some startling news on the morrow, for Jim Patton, veteran Brown guard, looks as if he were going to chew Yale's Bulldog into bits. Jim is one of the many veterans on the Brown eleven. Yale is the favorite but Brown isn't shedding any tears. Brown really looks for a win.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

YOU WILL MAKE a mistake if you count Eddie Mack out of the boxing game, even though the top sergeant is on his way to Houston, Tex., to care for some of the racing interests of Lou Smith.

In fact, you would be late in counting Mack out of anything. He is the type who always gets up off the ratings at the count of nine. And comes back fighting.

The top sergeant gathered quite a flock of decorations, including a wound on his head and a mark on his stomach from gas, while over there. He also picked up his share of decorations staging a run of shows in Boston during the four years of the depression.

With financial ruin [illegible] crashing all around him Mack managed to keep his boxing club going. I often wondered how he did it. I never seen him really old friends around him when it looked as if he was going to be washed out of the boxing game like other promoters.

Mr. Boston

Mack was usually surrounded by controversy. Folks were either boosting him or putting him on the pan. As a result he got publicity for his ring offerings, kept many a fighter and his manager out of the bread line and made enough money for himself to keep the wolf off the front lawn.

Of course Mack had his share of legal jams. He was fortunate to have as his counsel Matt McGrath and Bill Lewis. They represented Mack because they admired his fighting spirit. They wanted to assist him in getting back on his feet financially.

Mack gave up the boxing game temporarily when horse racing opened at Rockingham. He acted as director of publicity for Lou Smith and did a good job. That is why Smith has decided to place Mack in charge of his publicity at Houston and at Miami.

IF MACK CAN arrange a Lou Brouillard-Jimmy McLarnin bout, he will come popping back to the boxing game next Summer. Otherwise he will continue to follow the horses.

Incidentally, when I first met Mack 25 years ago he was a bookmaker and also managed a stable of boxers. In those days the bookmaker often knocked off as much as $25,000 a year from his bookmaking business. And, of course, blew the bank roll one way or another. Mack always did believe in keeping his money in action.

I wish him success and enjoyment in his travels. I would like to catch up with him in Miami next Winter. When Boston and New England are covered by a blanket of snow and the mercury is down around zero.

Florida is my idea of the best place in the world to spend the winter. I wish some sport director would break down there which would give me an excuse for getting aboard a train for Miami. In fact, I could be induced to go to Florida in the winter even without an excuse.

Fuller Against Petrolle

SAMMY FULLER will get another shot at Billy Petrolle when they meet in a ten-round bout at the Ridgewood Grove Club in New York tomorrow night. Fuller weighed 128 pounds when he ended his training at Kelley & Haves' gym. He is in excellent condition and confident of gaining ten many guns for Petrolle if Fuller wins the duke he will demand a bout with Baroo, Boston world's lightweight champion. Sammy says he can make 130 pounds which is the notch for the lightweight class.

Brouillard's Battle Plans

LOU BROUILLARD doesn't make any secret of his battle plans for his ten-round bout with Vince Dundee which will be held at the Boston Garden on Oct. 30.

"I realize Dundee is a fast, clever boxer," said Lou. "Therefore I shall crowd him from the opening gong. It would be unwise for me to stand off and try to outbox Dundee. I shall make a fight out of it, and am confident Vince won't be able to stand up under my body bombardment."

The title bout has caught on, and will take the depression out of the local boxing situation. I look for a capacity crowd when Brouillard and Dundee open fire at the Garden. The fact the show has been offered at the low price scale of 55 cents to $3 has stimulated interest in the championship event. Old John Public is occasionally entitled to a break. Even from boxing promoters.

Random Shots at Target

The six-day bike race at the Garden is out of the red. . . . John Chapman has furnished a good show, and the racing from now until the big event closes tomorrow night should be spirited. Lee Stout and George Underwood have done an excellent job in handling the publicity. . . . Also in caring for the physical needs of the reporters who have been entrenched at the Garden along with Col. Dave Egan.

TAP'S TIPS

ANDOVER BOY PILOTS BROWN IN BOWL GAME

Injuries, which have hampered Tuss McLaughry in developing an eleven the past two weeks, will deprive the team of the services of Dan Frand, regular center, and Harry Spinney, quarterback.

On the other hand, Dick Batchelder, injured sub center is again in shape and will start in Frand's place. Fred Rea who plays both guard and center, is seen after an absence of two weeks. Bill Karahan, Mickey Wagner, Joe Buonanno, Henry Hall and George Levi, all of whom suffered minor hurts in the Spinney game are ready for regular service again.

In spite of being one made against Springfield on Saturday, Brown expects to show plenty of speed against Yale. The backfield has been welded together and is now running through McLaughry's famous lateral passing formation without a hitch.

Howard "Mickey" Walker, sophomore from Andover, Mass. will probably play as quarterback sharing that position with Capt. Joe Buonanno. Previously he has worked from the No. 1 or 3 positions, and has gained 225 yards on 32 runs from scrimmage in the last two games.

Tomorrow's game will be Ed Karaban's first appearance in the Bowl, for the 180-pound fullback was kept on the sidelines last season by the pre-eminence of the Chase-Gilbane combination. Having already carried the ball for 309 yards in two games, he rates as one of Brown's best ground gainers.

Report Sothoron to Manage Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Oct. 20. (AP) The Sentinel said it learned that Allan Sothoron, coach of the St. Louis Browns, will manage the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association next year.

The Sentinel said President Lewis Nahin of the Brewers claimed to have no knowledge that Sothoron will replace Frank O'Rourke as manager.

Nurmi Son's Feet Cause for Divorce Action

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 20 (AP)—Paavo Nurmi and his bride of less than two years have separated and despite denials it has been learned Mrs. Nurmi already has taken steps toward obtaining a divorce and custody of their year-old boy, Matti.

The Associated Press correspondent interviewed the wife's Finnish fiance, Count of the world's famous footprints and sounded the sports star, the couple disagreed on Paavo's interest in athletics as well as on the future of boy, whose feet caused disappointment to a fathers ambition to develop an athletic prodigy in the family.

"I have never engaged in athletics and they do not interest me," said Mrs. Nurmi. "I have never seen Paavo run. For me, he is a man, a sportsman. An athlete should never marry, unless he is willing to forego much of his activities.

"Marriage is a matter for two people but to Paavo it seems there is nothing else but the track and his training. An athletic star is anti-social and it seems he cannot think of anything but himself. I was aware of this when I married Paavo because we had kept company for years. I even once broke off our engagement for that reason but Paavo promised to leave athletics so I could not refuse him. I should have known better.

KEPT PROMISE FIVE DAYS

"Every day some sporting leader would call upon him and persuade him to engage in some athletic activity. His friends said it was ridiculous for him to quit at the top of his form. Paavo kept his promise to me for only five days but I am not vexed because I should have known that it was impossible for him to live without his running.

"If he is not allowed to train every day he becomes as nervous that one cannot understand him. My belief is there are very few people who really know him at all. He is a restless spirit who cannot stay long in the same surroundings or the same job."

The baby Matti, who is just able to toddle about, came into the room while the correspondent was talking to his mother. The youngster has large blue eyes and . . . hair but Mrs. Nurmi says he is not so much the image of his father that he was earlier.

"My boy can decide for himself what he wants to be," she continued. "He must not become a competitive athlete, however. He may play tennis or engage in gymnastics or track sports, but I will not allow him to take up intensive training. Let us hope by the time he grows up the world will have become sensible again and laugh at this sporting madness."

MEASURED CHILD'S FEET

Besides, I am not afraid Matti will become a great runner. Paavo measured his feet when he was born and he was not satisfied with them. He even tried to arrange the boy's food so that Matti would become an athlete, but those feet have not stretched at all."

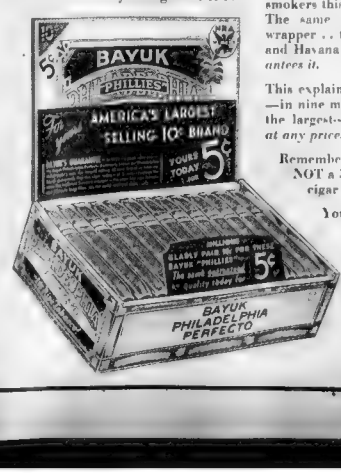
YOU CAN'T JUDGE Bayuk "Phillies" BY ANY 5¢ CIGAR

Bayuk "Phillies" was not made to sell for 5 cents. It was made to give smokers the best 10c cigar value in America—and they recognized it as such for years. It was the largest-selling 10c brand on the market.



Today—Bayuk "Phillies" gives smokers this same 10c value for 5c. The same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper . . the same fine Domestic and Havana long-filler. Bayuk guarantees it.

Remember . . Bayuk "Phillies" is NOT a 5c cigar. It's a proven 10c cigar value now selling for 5c.

Your dealer will tell you that more men like Bayuk "Phillies" than any cigar he sells. We tell you that never in history has a cigar so completely met the taste demands of experienced smokers.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (familiarly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

'HE MAN' CHOSEN TO BOOST NEW ACTRESS IN MOVIES

REDSKIN TILT PROMISES HOT GRID CLASH

By DAVID F. EGAN

The Chicago Cardinals are to visit Boston next Sunday afternoon, to play a game known as football against the Boston Redskins at Fenway Park, and our boys are determined to give their all for dear old Redskins.

In the past year, I have found out that professional athletes take their sports very seriously. The Red Sox were the worst losers that I've ever seen, man or boy. One couldn't approach former Manager Marty McManus for hours after a game, and Roy Johnson would sit and stare at his locker if he had made an error during the game.

NO FOOLING NOW

The professional footballers are just as intense. An amateur is one, according to the dictionary, who plays for the love of the game, and your envoy would like to point out, here and now, that most professional players are more strictly amateur than those who profess to be amateurs, in that they play for the love of the game.

There is promise of great fireworks on Sunday.

The Cardinals are headed by a back named Joe Lillard, the greatest colored back since the days of Fritz Pollard. He has managed to run wild against every club in the league, and though Boston has a stern defense, there is no reason to believe that the colored flash will not skedaddle once or twice against the home heroes.

FRALEY TESTS KUJOT ON MAT

Arena Card

First bout at 8 p. m. Main bout at 10 p. m.

MAIN BOUT

Pat Fraley, Montreal, vs. Joe Kujot, Montreal.
(Two falls out of three—no time limit).

SEMIFINAL

Harry Lundin, Ithaca, N. Y., vs. Al Mercier, Boston.

SPECIAL BOUTS

George Linnehan, Wayland, vs. Lee Ryan, Boston.

PRELIMINARIES

(One fall to win—15-minute time limit).

Jack Rose, Boston, vs. Dick Ritchie, Boston.

The noble wrestlers will return to the Arena tonight when Pat Fraley and Joe Kujot clash in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, under the direction of Alex MacLean.

Kujot is one of the latest wrestling stars. He has blasted his way to the front behind a double drop kick. He says he will drop kick the rather rugged Fraley out into St. Botolph st. this evening.

Harry Lundin will draw Al Mercier as an opponent in the semifinal. This bout will have a 30-minute limit and will be decided by one fall.

This Is Papa—Don't Laugh!

Brave Break for Freedom Lands Scribes in the Shower

By DAVID F. EGAN

Dear Ma:

Thanks ever so much for the mouse-trap, but we didn't need it, for two good and sufficient reasons, which I will explain to you.

(1) All the bike riders are somewhat rat-traps anyway.

(2) There was no rat in the laundry in the first place.

I tried to explain yesterday that a rat in the newspaper profession was taking in laundry during the six-day bike race, and swindling the fellows by charging large sums of money for the same. By "rat," I meant a fiend in human form or a low character who has no ethics, not a single, solitary ethic.

So we don't need the mouse-trap at all. All the fellows were glad that I didn't call him a swine, because they figure that you would have sent me a hog-caller. And it's bad enough here, as it is.

This fiend in human form continued his depredations today. He tore all the buttons off John Barry's shirt, even including the cuff buttons, and when Mrs. Barry arrived with the little ones, imagine her horror at seeing him with no buttons on his shirt. Luckily enough, though, his beard is long enough by now to cover up most of his pelt.

Mrs. Barry was very nice about it, after I had explained the matter. She went home for her needle and thread and some buttons. The children did not remember John, and there was a very touching scene when Mrs. Barry explained that all children have fathers as well mothers.

"And this," she said, pointing at John, "is your father."

You said in your letter today that I should be more careful in the selection of friends, Ma. I have no choice in the matter. We are all here together, and besides, Barry is not as bad as it would seem. He is fond of children and does not fight cops. But once I am released from here, I promise not to see him again.

We made a break for freedom today, fought our way through a couple of inner cordons of guards, and where did we wind up. I shall tell you where. We wound up in the Bruins dressing room, and couldn't get out. Anyway, we all took showers, so don't mind hearing the water for me Saturday night.

Naturally, it was discouraging after our brave break for liberty, but Mr Goodfellow, the gentleman who works for the Transcript, pointed out that everybody has a cross to bear in this life. He received a wild ovation when he constituted with the ringing words, "And besides, gentleman, this is better than working for a living!"

Stop worrying your head about poor Mr. Siegel. It is too late to worry about. When we cracked his starched underwear at the knees, we broke his right kneecap at the same time. He took it in good spirit. "I never did want to be a bike rider," he said between sobs. "Now perhaps I can get going in my chosen profession of flagpole sitting."

I am doing the work of two men today, but it keeps me cheerful and happy. Barry has developed a severe crick in the neck from watching the riders, and your favorite son has to watch the race from only five me, but also for him. John would do the same thing for me, though, I'm sure.

It only goes to show you that Eddie Hurley was right. When he arrived here last Monday night—it seems years ago, Ma—Eddie said to me, "Dave, there's only one way of covering a six-day bike race. Cover it backwards."

"You my word," said I, remembering what you said in your letter about using cross-words, "I never heard tell of covering a bike-race backwards. How do you do that?"

"You do it this way," said Mr. Hurley in a firm voice, as he turned his back to the track and faced the customers. "Now tell me what is happening, and I shall write it down. And when you get tired telling me, some other quarter-wit—his exact words, Ma—will be stupid enough to tell me. In this way, I never get a crick in the neck from watching the professional lunatics out there."

Could you put bars on my bedroom window? Danny is so handy around the house that I thought it would be a small matter for him to put up bars, or even board up the windows. I'd like to feel at home when I get home.

Charlie Winter, one of the riders, is sick with a severe cold, and I lent him the red flannel underwear. He tried to get out of here with us, but they lugged him back, threw him into a cot, doped him up with medicine, and he went right back to wheeling. Bike-riding is a form of slavery, or else all these riders had severe falls when they were children and are a bit soft in the head.

The pressed flower that you sent made John Barry cry. Love to everybody, especially yourself.

DAVE.

Soccer Rates Next to Football at Tufts

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Soccer must take second place to football at Tufts. This is the case at most colleges, but in a small institution where athletes are comparatively scarce it is sometimes hard to find good hooters after the needs of the football squad have been taken care of.

Coach [illegible] Berge himself a Tufts soccer player of three years ago did manage to uncover a promising group of men for the association game this fall and at the start of the season they things looked bright. But injuries, bugaboo of the football team also, took a heavy toll and Tufts played its opener against Amherst with five of its best soccer players out of the game with injuries. The Jumbos lost, 4-0.

PLAYS IN CLASS

Against the stronger opposition of Brown, the margin of defeat was but although two of the damaged regulars had returned. Tomorrow at Worcester Tufts plays Worcester Tech, another of the state's soccer Tech. Most of its casualties are back in shape, and the Engineer team is hoping to break into the victory column.

Last year Tufts won 4 and lost 4 in a relatively successful season, the first season for years that the eleven has more than broken even. Lack of good hookers, the hooters on Medford Hillside put up a good season if compared to two new soccer fields will be available near the new gymnasium.

LEARNED GAME ABROAD

Captain of the Tufts ball kickers this fall is Herman Gauger, a German boy who received his early training in Europe. He plays inside right, and is one of the most reliable men on the team. Herb Pierce playing his first year of soccer for Tufts is a veteran of two seasons back; he was out of college last year. Berge considers him one of his best fullbacks.

Another center forward got [illegible] soccer training at Stevens Institute. Transferring to Tufts he was ineligible for the [illegible] season, but has now won a regular position with the team. Phil Garner, starting inside left, and Bill Lewis, center forward or halfback, who captained last year's freshman eleven, are just back in the lineup after being out with injuries.

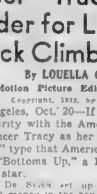
Spencer Tracy Chosen as Ladder for Lilian Harvey's Quick Climb to Popularity

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Oct. 20—If anything can cinch Lilian Harvey's popularity with the American public it will be the selection of Spencer Tracy as her leading man. Tracy, who is the big "he man" type that Americans love, will emote opposit Miss Harvey in "Bottoms Up," a Buddy De Sylva number written for the Fox star.

The usual De Sylva set up which has put money in the box office in the past, will prevail. David Butler is to direct.



Louella O. Parsons

De Sylva is to be in charge of both story and music. Reports are current in Hollywood that Spencer and Mrs. Tracy are separated a month ago will find a solution to their domestic difficulties in an amicable divorce to be filed shortly.

Spot for "Honey" Fitz

Maybe Sweet Adeline," operetta produced by Arthur Hammerstein on the New York stage a few years ago, didn't start the vogue for the gay nineties stuff but at any rate it gave other writers ideas. William Rowland and Monte Brice, who are doing all right in New York, will produce a picture in the East based on "Sweet Adeline," but it will have a Hollywood cast. Negotiations are now under way with Vivienne Segal, Phillips Holmes and Irene Franklin. The words and music by Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, and Jerome Kern remain intact as they stood.

Radio Crosses Dope

No one ever told me that Katharine Hepburn was set for the role that Katharine Cornell created in "Age of Innocence" on the stage. I just got an idea that she was the perfect choice for Edith Wharton's heroine. Radio today decided that Irene Dunne would be starred in "The Age of Innocence" and maybe it's just as well since Jane Murfin is writing the adaptation. Jane did such a swell job of adaptation on "Ann Vickers" for Miss Dunne.

Dorothy Is "Out"

Dorothy Jordan's San Francisco doctor has definitely vetoed her continuing in "Wild Birds." Miss Jordan has joined her husband, Merian Cooper, outside San Francisco where they intend to remain with him until he is entirely well from the throat affliction which has kept him in a hospital there for over a month. Meanwhile a search is being made to get in actress to take Miss Jordan's place. Negotiations were on today with Jean Parker, MGM's favorite protegee and with Marian Nixon who arrived in New York Tuesday. Miss Jordan will remain off the screen until after the birth of the Cooper heir.

Guest of Marion Davies

Fascinated with the inside workings of our American motion picture studios, Thelma Cazalet, member of British Parliament, spent an entire afternoon visiting Marion Davies' talking number, "Making Whoopee," by Miss Davies and Jack Crowley in a rural setting particularly delighted. Hollywood's interesting guest, he said it never occurred to her to visit the British film studios. In fact, she asked how English films could compete with the MGM citadel. Related indirectly to the Wodehouses by the marriage of her brother to P. G. Wodehouse's daughter, Miss Cazalet came to California at their suggestion.

'Pugs' in Cast

Those who remember old time pugilists will recognize "Pueblo Kid" Jim and Frank Moran in "Mr. Lowery," now having its first downtown screenings at Keith's Boston.

Flynn and Moran appear in support of three stars, Wallace Beery, George Raft and Jackie Cooper.

It will be remembered that "Pueblo Jim" Flynn knocked out Jack Dempsey when the latter was a ring beginner, while Jess Willard, when he was world champ took a powerful pounding from Moran. A score of other ring stars also appear in "The Bowery."

Hamlet in Hollywood

Hollywood, Oct 20—John Barrymore will play Hamlet in the Hollywood Bowl this winter, he decided after a private test of the amphitheater's acoustics.

Representatives of many important health and social welfare organizations have expressed their conviction of the effectiveness of the film, "Damaged Lives," now at the Park. It is an appealing human story, produced with rare good taste.

The American Social Hygiene Association announces it welcomes inquiries about the picture or questions prompted by it and will be glad to hear from social hygiene societies, health or civic agencies or other groups interested in having this picture shown in their local theaters.

Jimmy installed a piano on the stage where he was working and began daily work on the intricate dance steps. This he kept up for three weeks until he had perfected his steps and was ready to begin that par. of the produc-

Two New Films at Paramount and Fenway

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

By some sort of movie hocus-pocus "Bureau of Missing Persons" is turned into one of the oddest of pictures. Featured at the Paramount and Fenway, the new movie reveals itself as hilarious comedy, instead of a matter-or-fact discussion of the mysteries of a division of police headquarters routine.

* * *

Neither a bull in a china shop, nor a burlesque show of the prestrip days, suddenly transplanted into a stayed police office, could achieve the rowdy havoc of fun of Roy Del Ruth's direction of this film. Hollywood gives its own idea of such a bureau and its workings. Now and then bits of drama and pathos creep in, but for the most part Del Ruth centers his attention on sure-fire gags that make the film worth sitting through.

* * *

Film Is Hilarious

After all, this was the best way, from an audience point of view, to handle the idea. Otherwise, we might have had pure instruction from a tedious footage, instead of plenty to laugh at.

Del Ruth is an ace hand at the comic, and here he has pretty able acting aides. His pace is fast, quickly he cuts his scenes, always speeding the action. But this isn't a photoplay at all; it's dramatically considered, hodge-podge, but delightful for mirth's sake.

Lewis Stone is one of the few characters appearing throughout the piece, and this old master spreads a fine spell by the sincerity of his work. Various players weave in and out, among them Pat O'Brien, as a sap cop; Bette Davis, as a feminine lead in a minor sort of way, and—Allen Jenkins.

* * *

Menjou Ably Aided

For once Adolphe Menjou has a woman opposite him who stays him for acting laurels. This happens to be "The Worst Woman in Paris," companion picture at the Paramount and Fenway. The lady is Benita Hume, a perfect partner for the suave Mr. Menjou. As long as they are together on screen, the movie is pert and chipper, so that it's bound to end strike a high note of sophisticated comedy.

In between the theme gets melodramatic and strikes a number of snags. This middle portion is extremely oldfashioned, but it's away from most of it with the smartness of that start and that finish.

GEORGE HOLLAND ACCOMPANIES ALICE THROUGH WONDERLAND AT COLONIAL

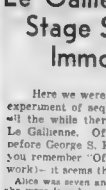
By GEORGE HOLLAND

Here we were finding something new in the past month's experiment of sequel-izing a successful show, forgetting that all the while there has been "Lewis Carroll" and Miss Eva Le Gallienne. Of such stuff as dreams are made on—even before George S. Kaufman came out of Pittsburgh and surely you remember "Of Thee I Sing" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake" (his work)— it seems there was a child named Alice.



Eva Gallienne

Alice was seven and a half and she wore long brown curls. One night, puzzled napping at her lessons she fell asleep, not knowing that "Lewis Carroll," her biographer, was nearby.

Alice wandered into a strange stratosphere called Wonderland and "Lewis Carroll" oversees ing. Then she had succeeding strange adventures—"Through a Looking Glass." But the vigilant "Lewis Carroll" was again on the watch, and those adventures, too, were set down in print.

And there was a sequel for you!

Of course, Eugene O'Neill became quite a sequel-izer a year or two ago with three nights of one play, a trilogy named "Of Thee I Sing and "Let 'Em Eat Cake' again. But if memory is on the square both these businesses, as well as Mr. O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" were grasped as revolutionary sequels.

Last night, although we're not discovering much as there was a "last night" for New York last spring, Miss Le Gallienne presented at the Colonial a bit of sequel-izing of her own. It didn't continue over two years, or even three nights.

Before midnight it was finished, to unanimous applause. "Alice in Wonderland" was the first act and "Through a Looking Glass" was the second.

* * *

No doubt with obeisance in her heart to "Lewis Carroll," the originator, and John Tenniel, who illustrated the original, Miss Le Gallienne justified her presumption in competing with the commercial minds of Times sq. as well as the heritage of her birth as daughter of her famous poet-father.

Here is grand, living romance, aided by every clever enhancement the stage can render. Where "Lewis Carroll" whisked his white queen off into space before Alice's dazzled eyes by a sentence, Miss Le Gallienne and her technicians accomplish it by wires.

* * *

And who do you think was the White Queen? Although the night before last she was mouthing the love-aches of an ethereal Juliet, Miss Le Gallienne on wires last night dangled over the proscenium arch undunified and spiderwise but excellent. She, the boss, played the small and acrobatic role, White Queen.

Josephine Hutchinson was Alice.

* * *

Alice was seven and a half and she wore long brown curls. She is curled up in an enormously large red chair by the fireplace. Alice was baffled because everything in a mirror she gazed in was opposite of what they should be.

* * *

So she stepped through the mirror. Into and across a pool of tears, and into a mad tea party, onto a croquet ground owned by the Queen.

More baffled now than the poor child could ever be at home again, notwithstanding the puzzling workings of the mirror, Alice encounters a trial. Nothing in Suffolk County was ever matched by that trial, and in her wholesale mystification, Alice, through a sustained quality of superb miming by Miss Hutchinson, carries you to a curtain where you wish to hug her.

With her you have met White Rabbit, Crab, Caterpillar Duchess, Cheshire Cat, March Hare, Mad Hatter, Dormouser Gryphone, and Mock Turtle.

In the second part, come the famous verses "Jabberwocky," "The Walrus and The Carpenter" and "Haddock's Eyes," and Alice encounters The Walrus and The Carpenter, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, and the White Knight.

The highlight of the evening to me was Alice's encounter with the White Knight. The White Knight rides a noble white steed, the front part played by Albert Philion, and the hind or nether part by Ruth Wilton. This intriguing instance of hi-seeing a stage steed is the finest in memory.

* * *

To the pun, parody, philosophy of the author, Miss Le Gallienne has added superb casting, novel staging and ingenious direction. It is as good an Alice in Wonderland as you can hope to see, and Richard Addinsell succeeds with a score that Gilbert and Sullivan walked away from.

Glancing over this, it seemed I liked it. Alright. Matinees are today and tomorrow.

Marion Davies' New Picture Has Bing Crosby With Star

Marion Davies' new musical screen production, "Going Hollywood," soon to be shown here, gives every indication of being one of the outstanding pictures of the year. This new Cosmopolitan Production Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering combines not only an amusing and sometimes dramatic story with some of the catchiest, most melodious music yet to be turned out on the screen. In addition there are several spectacular singing and dancing numbers. Some of these are sung by Bing Crosby, famous radio crooner, Miss Davies' leading man in the picture.

The story of "Going Hollywood" was written by Donald Ogden Stewart and C. Gardner Sullivan, with musical numbers by the popular song-writing team of Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. According to reports there are half a dozen outstanding songs in the picture. Most of them were written especially for the dramatic episodes in which they figure in the production.

Bing Crosby's old musical side partner, Lennie, Hayton, and the talented Herbert Stothart have charge of the direction of the musical numbers. There is an Albertina Rasch ensemble in which Miss Davies is featured, and a large chorus.

The locale of the story is a Hollywood motion picture studio with Fifi D'Orsay singing the part of a temperamental French motion picture star. Bing Crosby has the convenient role of a radio crooner who goes to Hollywood to appear in a picture opposite the French star. Marion Davies as Sally Brure, who has given up a position in a fashionable girls' school in a New York suburb, goes along to Hollywood as maid to the actress. There are some dramatic and amusing incidents in which the actor [illegible] benefits of temperament [illegible] from the lead and the former schoolmarm takes her place [illegible] ceding her also in the good graces of the radio crooner. The large cast includes Stuart Erwin, Ned Sparks, Patsy Kelly, Henry Armetta, Bobby Watson and others.

Concert Music in Grand Vein

By MOSES SMITH

The first Jordan Hall concert opened the season auspiciously last evening, when Ossip Gabrilowitsch played to an audience that crowded the auditorium and applauded him "to the echo."

The success of the concert was a tribute to the excellent following which Gabrilowitsch enjoys in this city, and to his beautiful playing. It was also in part accountable to the shrewdness of the management in suiting its price schedule to the times, and in selecting for the concert an intimate hall likely to be filled.

Gabrilowitsch confined his program to music of Schumann and Chopin, even so far as the encores were concerned. Nor was the program monotonous for containing only works of the two great romantic composers. Schumann was represented by the great fantasy and the G minor sonata; Chopin by a ballade, a nocturne, a waltz a mazurka, a prelude and two studies.

As to the playing, it was for the most part in the grand vein, the artist evoking magnificent sonorities from his instrument at one moment, and at the next caressing it with the gentlest touch imaginable. It was playing of vigor and rhythmic power, of poesy and sentiment, of technical brilliance and finishness—and without offensive poses. Small wonder that the audience was reluctant to leave after hearing more than two hours of such playing.

Little Difficulty in Disposing of Them, States Fahey

By FRANK H MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

John H. Fahey, New England member of the Home Owners' Loan Bank Board, reports the Home Owners Loan Corporation has not had but little difficulty in placing its bonds with [illegible] exchange for home mortgages. Although the O. L. C bonds achieved a notable triumph this week when receiving the premium [illegible] national banks [illegible] mortgages for "Home Loan" securities, Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor announced that such exchange might be made. His solo provision was that they be submitted to his office for approval.

LIKELY BUYS ARE NOTED

The issues traders indicate they will buy are the high powered most favored issues capable of giving them a real rip for their money. For the same reason the semi-speculative follower of shares should stay at home. The latter will have their turn when the list finally flattens out and makes preparations for the next phase of the bull market.

* * *

The reason known good favorites are noted is that it is in such issues acute distress make an appearance. Consequently they receive the better support and are finished back fastest since the intent is extending the support are not offensive and like to receive

[illegible]

Notes Celanese, Schenley, Illinois Central, New York Central, Steel, Can, Monsanto Chemical and Johns Manville are mentioned among the likely buys. One exception to the comments arent semi-speculative traders is Darby Petroleum, the big crude. This one may be bought and put away with the [illegible] in the box for long holding.

The discrepancy in the declines of the industrial and rail averages vexes acute distress makes an anPhase is the one your feature left to worry about. Observers [illegible] hardly seems that it will not be eliminated before a fresh upswing is important. While it does exist, however, it offers some odd possibilities.

* * *

A statistical friend of ours broke the averages down into individual issues and then compared prices of that week with those of late April. He discovered that on a dollars and cents basis the rails are 36 higher now while the industrials show a gain of 38. This presented a problem solved by examining individual gains.

*More Notes. The appreciation of Business Machine, Chrysler, Allied Chemical and Kodak over last April's prices are [illegible] in excess of other issues of current prices . . . In other words these stocks of themselves are responsible for the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

New York, Oct. 20—Price changes for leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange were narrow today. In the second hour the general list had replaced losses of fractions to a point or more with similar net gains. Trading was brisk. Alcohols lagged slightly, but metals and other industrials were easily responsive to buying.

Standard Oil of California was heavy among oils, losing more than 2 points at one time. National Distillers and Allied Chemical virtually cancelled losses of 1 to 2 points.

Shares showing net advances of a point or more included American Telephone, Johns-Manville, Case, American Can, Celanese, Chrysler, U. S. Smelting, U. S. Steel, American Smelting, and New York Central.

In the first hour shares prices were juggled back and forth with little progress being made in either direction. Metal shares were inclined to firm while alcohol shares, after a steady start, were buffeted about in uncertain fashion. U. S. Smelting and American Smelting were moderately higher. U. S. Steel was steady around its last closing price. Kennecott Copper improved fractionally.

American Commercial Alcohol was down about a point, Libby-Owens-Ford Glass lost a point and Anchor Cap was off over a point. Schenley Distillers was strong, advancing almost 2 points.

Calls of a point or better were recorded for Case, Celanese, American Telephone, Chrysler and Commercial Solvents. Moderate recessions appeared for Western Union, Auburn, American Sugar and Allied Chemical. Allied Chemical slipped back two points.

Sales to 11 A. M. approximated 1,010,000 shares.

Lowering of the New York Reserve Bank's rediscount rate to 2 per cent from 2½ coincided with a reduction in the amount of government securities purchased by the Central Banking System. In the past week buying approximated $31,000,000 as against the recent weekly average of $35,000,000.

It was understood the reserve authorities believed current excess reserves in member banks, around $800,000,000, had reached a level at which credit might be expected to flow more freely into industry, and it was assumed in some quarters that the system's open market operations might continue to taper off.

The bank rate cut had been anticipated, if for no other reason than to bring the level of discounts by into line with the general money market, but the reserve board, it was said, hoped the reduced rate action would stimulate credit expansion from the huge reservoir available.

Free Press in Danger

The Alabama Episode

(Reprinted From the Kansas City Star)

The announcement by an Assistant Secretary in the Department of Labor that "officers of the Department have been advised that they have no right to tell any editor what he may or may not print, and that nothing in the NRA or any other Federal statute gives them such a right" must be profoundly disturbing to every American citizen who has the slightest comprehension of the basis upon which his Government rests.

The shocking aspect of this announcement is not that the advice tendered to the officers of the Department of Labor is unsound. On the contrary, it is perfectly correct. What is so disturbing is that any representatives of the United States Government should have to be given advice upon such an elementary constitutional question.

For the permanent and inalienable protection of that liberty the necessary majority of States ratified the first ten amendments to the Constitution, popularly known as the "Bill of Rights," of which the first article reads: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." This complete freedom of the press, subject only to the commonly accepted restrictions as to slander, libel and obscenity and of treason in war time, has gone virtually unchallenged from that day until this.

Why, then, should it be necessary for a Government department now to warn its officials that they have no right under the NRA or any other Federal statute to dictate to a newspaper editor what he may or may not say in his paper?

The immediate reason for the Assistant Secretary's announcement is simple. A mediator for the Department's Conciliation Commission had threatened the editor of an Alabama paper with Federal prosecution if he continued to comment upon labor unions in a way which the mediator did not like. When the editor refused to be intimidated and published an account of the affair the Department of Labor promptly disavowed its agent's action and notified all of its officials that they were not vested with any control over the press.

If the Alabama episode merely showed the hand of a misguided official it would call for only passing reference. But every informed person who has followed recent developments in the United States, in the light of what has been happening in Germany and elsewhere, knows that much more is involved in the present situation with respect to the historic freedom of the press than is evident in any isolated instance of interference.

The fact is that the National Recovery Program, with its emphasis upon patriotic co-operation to improve the country's economic condition, has produced the attendant danger that any criticism of the program, no matter how constructive or restrained, may be considered as a species of treason. And the Government's proposal to license all newspapers constitutes potentially the most serious attack upon the freedom of the press that has ever been made in the United States in time of peace.

It is true that theoretically the licensing proposal is designed merely to enforce certain industrial code requirements and has nothing to do with the editorial freedom of the newspapers.

Newspapers, of course, have two distinct sides. They are business institutions, and, as such, are amenable to any reasonable regulations, like those applied to other industries. But they are also agencies for reporting facts and commenting upon those facts, and, as such, they occupy a special position of public trust and public necessity which must be protected from influence and contamination at any cost.

That protection is gone the moment the Government is given authority to suppress a newspaper on any pretext whatever. There are other methods of bringing pressure to bear upon a newspaper to make it live up to its industrial obligations than to interfere with its publication.

It is no reflection upon the Roosevelt Administration to point out that a group of unscrupulous officials could use the power to withdraw a newspaper's license for technical violations of the newspaper code, actually to stop criticism, and, what is even more important, that they could constantly employ the threat of such action to forestall criticism.

In the face of such an episode as the effort to muzzle an Alabama paper, who can say that there is no practical danger in the licensing proposal? It is full of danger not only to a free press but to a free people. The sooner the Administration drops so perilous a project the better for all concerned.

Escaping From Alcatraz

Attorney-General Cummings announced that Alcatraz, the military island prison in San Francisco Bay, had been chosen for the life-long immuring of incorrigible criminals because no man had ever escaped from its walls.

But kidnapers and other miscreants sent there need not feel encouraged.

Miss Scott happens to be an accomplished swimmer. Nonetheless, it took her forty-three minutes to make the mile and a half crossing, in ideal weather and with a rescue boat at hand.

An escaping prisoner would hardly find conditions so favorable. All in all, therefore, if the United States needs a prison isle Alcatraz would seem to be about as secure as any obtainable.

The Sin of Righteousness

"I cried it from the housetops, Lord! I told my brother's sin!
And when he tapped upon my door I would not let him in.
I gave myself to righteousness. I labored for the law,
And hurled my shafts of bitterness 'gainst every wrong I saw.

'I stood alone in anger, Lord! And, oh, the years were long!
My eyes were blind to beauty and my ears were deaf to song.
I carried hatred in my heart for evil, high or low,
Till every man who blundered once looked on me as a foe.

"I did my bitter duty, Lord! I fought with all my might—
So much I hated wickedness, so much I loved the good,
The gracious Lord made answer: "From the silence of the grave
Comes not a word from anyone you pitied or forgave.
How then shall I forgive you now who lived on earth so long
And had no love for any man who blundered into wrong?"

And the delegates assembled
See an unlaid ghost appearing

See again the ghastly spectre,
See the death's head and the sword blade
That still haunts the house of Europe.

Fleeting Ideas

NEW YORK, Oct. 20—Thoughts while strolling: Wonder if they have back-yard picnics any more?

Italians sporting Balbo chin whiskers. Merle Crowell and Lee Brown bear a resemblance. No one sings "Home on the Range" on the radio like John Charles Thomas. Or talks so well as Dr. Fosdick.

Sumner Blossom, a Kansas City, Mo. boy, who made good in the city. Few turn out so much readable copy as Arthur Brisbane. Someone tells me he once dictated an essay to a stenographer while sliding down a Kansas City shute-the-chutes. Only the best restaurants serve tripe in New York.

One word description of Eddie Eagan—chivalric. George Horace Lorimer's son Burford. Two tough words to spell properly—Obligato and focusing. What's become of Ann Pennington? Maybe it's the strenuous diet that makes the modern girl speak so softly. Hungry!

Florence Tempest and her Boston. Difficult to imagine the vivacious Mrs. Pat Campbell is 70. One of my favorite people—Jack Puzak. Lenore Ulric still walks with that Lulu Belle glide. Houston's young white-haired mayor—Oscar Holcombe. Russel Crouse and Corey Ford.

Sheila Barrett, the mimic, always looks as though she's about to bust out crying. O. Soglow is the only artist who looks like his drawings. Somehow I've always wanted to introduce Childe Hassam to Ben Ali Haggin. And Walter Pitkin to Chalter Riffin. My Sealyham must have inspired "Lazy Bones."

Fred C. Kelly used to boast of his one-man dog, an Airedale. The animal lived with the writer on his farm near Peninsula, O., and would go nowhere without his master. Once he brought him to New York. The big city confused him or something, for he would follow anybody that called except Kelly, at whom he snapped constantly.

I went to a studio recently with a broadcaster much in love with love. His lady fair was listening in and he explained how certain inflections would have a meaning all their own for her. It reminded of interpolations I used to write in small-town items as tender messages for the only girl. I spent hours fashioning them and they sound pretty gosh-awful, especially when my wife reads them to company. But then I regarded it as the flowering of genius.

Economy has given windowdressing a jewel box sparkle along the de luxe shopping centers. Large display windows have a plushed box background with a small opening for display of a single article. An evening slipper, a purse, etc. The solitary effort produces a grandiose effect at one twentieth the ordinary cost.

Windows that, so far as I can recall, never change, are Tiffany's. Each for years displayed only winged Mercury in bronze. I always look the other way in passing, just to be snooty, too.

A little-patronized jeweler in our town unconsciously carried out the Tiffany idea. All my remembering years his single window held an eight-day clock with a pendulum on a thread. This pendulum on top of the clock swung from one upright bar to the other, winding neatly around. I used to be often late from Mrs. Hanson's with the evening milk watch. And to this day I'd like to own that clock.

I never see the old burlesquer, Hap Ward without a smile over, to me, his grandest story. Old but ever amusing. It concerns the colored fellow trapped one midnight in a chicken coop. The owner with his shotgun, after several futile calls, declared that if whoever it was didn't come out he'd shoot. A thin twittering whine finally replied: "Ain't no one in here 'cept us little chickens!"

And H. T. Webster thinks the most modest of all life's ambitions is a yen to sit at the cantain's table on one of those perky little barges that toot up and down the North River.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

High Cost of Excusing

YOU GET so mad! Looking back over your life you get so mad and discouraged. Just one darned mess after another. One flop after another. What's the use? You never have the breaks—

But maybe there's a reason why you never have the breaks. Maybe there's a reason why your life is just one mess after another. Stop a minute. Wipe your tears, pull up your jaw—and use the good old bean.

Elsie Robinson

There was that mistake you made this morning; you've almost forgotten it. Don't forget it. Sit down and think about it. That mistake was important. It holds the secret of all your misfortunes. You don't believe that? Listen—

You made that mistake. Just a silly little mistake. But what did you do about it? You did what you have always done whenever you made a mistake, big or little—YOU LOOKED AROUND FOR AN EXCUSE. Quick as a flash, without a moment's hesitation, you looked around for an excuse.

And that, of course, was natural. It was the old animal instinct of self-preservation asserting itself. Mistakes mean trouble. Trouble means danger, discomfort, humiliation, possibly punishment. An animal's first impulse is to hide from danger. You, too, are an animal. Your first impulse, also, is to duck.

So you ducked. As soon as you made that mistake, you grabbed the nearest excuse, and ducked. That was easy. One can always find a thousand handy alibis. Blame someone else. Say you were sick. Say you didn't know.

You made an excuse. Probably it was a good excuse. It satisfied others. It prevented trouble, shushed the nagging. And you felt fine! You stopped feeling shaky inside, prickly outside. Your courage was returned: your vanity was soothed. Everything was jake again. Or was it?

No, it wasn't. For you really haven't wiped out that mistake at all—and you know you haven't. You'll go on making mistakes just like that again and again. Life will continue to be "one darned mess after another"—until—

Until you stop ducking—stop making excuses, and force yourself to face the real reason for all these messes.

But what is the real reason?

The real reason is YOURSELF.

The real reason is SOMETHING IN YOUR OWN NATURE.

Many other things may come into the picture. Other people may come in. Sickness may come in. Disorder may come in.

But behind the other people, behind the sickness and disorder, lies some weakness in your own nature that is tricking and trapping you again and again.

Some weakness—laziness, conceit, cowardice, greediness, silliness—which is it? I don't know. Nobody can know except yourself. And you'll never know until you stop running away and turn and face yourself.

Even then you must be ruthlessly honest, ruthlessly brave, if you wish to help yourself. You mustn't allow yourself to make even one smallest excuse for yourself, to lay even a particle of the blame on the other fellow. Making excuses, passing the blame, these things will give you temporary comfort. But—if you do it, you're lost. Life will go on being "one flea after another." You will go on whining, whimpering, crawling.

Long ago a Wise Man sat talking to his friends. Plain on their faces he read the record of their discouragement and discontent. Once more they asked him for the secret of success. Smiling a little sadly, for He knew they would never follow it, He said:

"KNOW THE TRUTH, AND THE TRUTH SHALL MAKE YOU FREE."

Know the truth about yourself. Then the weakness in yourself, which is responsible for all your misery, will no longer spoil your life.

You can be free. You can be strong. You can be happy. You need only to face yourself.

BUT HAVE YOU WHAT IT TAKES?

'Lame Duck' Amendment Now Law of the Land

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Constitutional history was made this week when the first two sections of the Twentieth Amendment to the Federal Constitution became effective.

This amendment, generally known as the "Lame Duck" Amendment, was ratified in record-breaking time by the several states.

It would have been ratified years ago had Congress been willing to submit it for the approval of the states.

Long before Congress was willing to recommend the changes for which this amendment provides, the common sense of the American people made them realize the desirability of these changes.

The Twentieth Amendment changes the date for the inauguration of the newly elected President and vice-president from March 4 to January 20. It changes the time of the annual convening of Congress from noon on the first Monday in December to noon of the third day of January.

Under the old system, a Congress elected in November of one year did not convene until December of the following year, 13 months after it had been voted into power.

Under the old system, the newly elected President and Vice-President did not take the oath of office until the 4th of March of the year following the November election.

COUNTRY SUFFERED

As a result, the country suffered every four years from a hold-over Congress which legislated throughout December, January, February and the first few days of March after its successor had been elected.

This came to be called the "Lame Duck Session."

The reason why the framers of the Constitution provided for this holdover session was a practical one. In the "ox-cart" days of the nation, methods of communication and means of travel were vastly slower than they are today. In those early days of the Republic it took weeks, and, in some cases, months, for the people in the remote parts of the United States to learn the results of a national election, and even longer for the returns from the various congressional districts to be officially delivered in the federal city.

In that way "lame duck," or defeated senators and representatives, more than one held the balance of power in one House of Congress or the other.

Today, the radio, the telephone and the telegraph give to the whole nation on election night the minute details of election returns in the various states and congressional districts. And our modern system of transportation makes it possible for the newly elected senators and representatives in Congress from the far corners of the Republic to travel quickly from their homes to Washington.

The Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution meets the challenge of a new day by eliminating "lame duck" senators and representatives in Congress and by abolishing the "lame duck" or short session.

IN CASE PRESIDENT DIES

In addition to these changes, the Twentieth Amendment provides for two others of real importance. One of these fixes the succession to the presidency following a presidential election by designating the Vice-President-elect as acting President in the event of the death of the President-elect, or in case there is a deadlock or failure on the part of the President-elect to qualify.

This new amendment also gives the Congress power to provide by law for filling the presidency in case neither a President-elect or a Vice-President-elect shall have qualified.

Congress is also given the power by the new amendment to provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon the House.

Under the old system, had the House been called upon to elect the President, the choice would have been made by the expiring instead of the newly-elected Congress.

As a result of the ratification of the Twentieth Amendment, which now goes into effect, the official terms of President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner will terminate on Jan. 20, 1937, instead of on March 4 of that year.

President's Army of Peace Accomplished Much—Huge List of Missing in New York

By Edwin C. Hill

The President's new army of peace, the hundreds of thousands of young men drawn from cities and towns for forestry work, are perceptibly changing the face of the land.

With the expiration of the first six months' enlistment period of the reforestation army, my mind traveled back to a day in April when I watched the enrollment of young men in this peace army which Franklin D. Roosevelt was sending into the forests of the country to relieve the unemployment situation. Swarms of recruits turned up at the Army Building—all kinds—white collar clerks, barbers, telegraph operators, salesmen miners and blacksmiths.

I had had misgivings, along with many others. There had arisen a picture of thousands idling away their time under a thinly-veiled dole system. But misgivings faded when I witnessed the selection of the young and grown men who are part of this huge army, which went to a new front to fight at one dollar a day for the preservation of our plant and tree life.

They were, for the most part, healthy, vigorous, adventurous youngsters eager for a chance to work and work hard. They were smiling and happy, too, and as one of them told me, the chance to enlist was a life saver for him. He had reached the limits of hope. Now he was to get away from the city which had imprisoned and stifled him for twenty years. He was sure of food and lodging and the support of his younger brothers and his mother. The President's plan and quick action put new heart and hope in all these men feeling a tremendous job in 161,000,000 acres of national forests.

Nearly 12,000 miles of forest telephone lines have been put in, 12,700 miles of range fences built, along with 60,000 miles of highways, minor roads and trails. Pests and rusts have been brought under control on 1,800,000 acres, and many acres cleared of fire hazards. Swamps and breeding places for mosquitoes have been filled in, undesirable and unsightly spots cleaned up and made to literally blossom as the rose.

Many miles of waste space have been parked and beautified. And a trip this summer through one of those sections where hundreds of men, dressed in blue denim or striped to the waist, were at work bringing order, symmetry and beauty to the land, was evidence that here, at least, is a partial solution of the problem of our idle and roving youth. And the prophecy of Robert P. Stuart, chief of the United States forest service, has truly been fulfilled, as was evidenced by the spirit of the men just the other day when they re-enlisted or, fearlessly and with a new light in their eyes, stepped into some other work. Six months ago Mr Stuart said:

"It may be life itself to thousands of our citizens. It will permit men to face the world with a clearer eye, a stouter heart and a revived purpose. It will not be amiss if it helps restore to our people the urge to work in the great outdoors, to contribute their part of the upbuilding of our depleted forest resources."

There is nothing so stimulating or revivifying as the clean, quiet contact with the out-of-doors, that provides a new prospective and calls to the courage in the heart of every man.

Chief Inspector John J. O'Brien, of the New York police, reveals that 27,000 persons were reported as missing in the great city in the past year, yet only 540 remain unaccounted for. In other words, the New York police get 98 per cent of the men, women and children who become lost, strayed or stolen.

Years ago there was a popular melodrama entitled, "Why Girls Leave Home." Chief Inspector O'Brien has an answer for that: "They disappear because of unadjusted home life and the lure of the stage. Any other reasons apply to a negligible number of cases. It is the failure of the parents to provide the proper atmosphere, as well as family quarrels and the browbeating of the youngsters, which send them forth to greener pastures."

About 100 times a day the telephone rings in New York Police Headquarters to report that Sally Jones, Johnny Smith, Mrs. Brown or Grandpa White is not to be found. Immediately the wheels begin to turn in the Bureau of Missing Persons. Schools, hospitals, places of business are checked, and the laundries. Strange as it may seem, the laundry is a key unit to the Bureau because of its system of giving a distinguishing mark to each family wash.

The youngsters are usually turned up quickly, because, with them, it generally is a matter of wanderlust or romance. Adults are much more difficult to run to earth, since a personal or secret reason is generally to be connected with their straying.

The boys are a much of a problem, but the girls give the police, as well as their parents, many sleepless nights until they are brought back. And at times they do not come back to the knowledge of the world, although the police have located them and have marked their cases closed. All too often, indeed, circumstances demand that the affair shall be closed to the eyes of the world.
